Ford Agrees To Meet Code Terms, Bare Data Ordered

Johnson Reveals Wages and Hours Will Be Given in Report.

Boycott Campaign Hangs in Balance

Wagner Delays Decision in Factory Strikes, Awaiting Reply.

Henry Ford, biggest holdout of the Administration's Blue Eagle campaign, has promised to report wages and hours at his factories to the automobile code authority.

This announcement yesterday by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson was taken to indicate that the Detroit manufacturer intends to abide by his industry's code, even though he does not fly the Blue Eagle.

Gen. Johnson, who launched the Government's boycott move last Friday, did not single out Mr. Ford for his announcement, but listed the Ford Motor Co. among those that had responded to an inquiry sent them October 28 by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Ford to Report Soon.

Practically all manufacturers under the automobile code have either submitted their figures to the code authority or given assurance that they would do so, the administrator said. Johnson listed 24 who have already complied and 28 others who had promised to do so on specified dates. The Ford company will report on November 6 or 7, he said.

Further evidence that Mr. Ford intends to comply with the automobile code was based on a statement by Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, who told newspapermen late yesterday he believed more time should be allowed for negotiations between strikers and the management of the Ford assembling plants at Edgewater, N. J., and Chester, Pa.

"The facts tell the whole story," Senator Wagner declared. "The management was authorized to meet with the employes. The strikers made certain proposals. Then the management took the position it was not authorized to make any decisions and referred the proposals to Dearborn. An answer has been promised and I think we should wait and see what comes of it."

Reply Expected Soon.

Reveler Slashes Five at Festival

Razor-Wielder Identified; 4 Youths, Policeman Are Victims.

Brandishing a pair of razors, an enraged Negro ran amuck in carnival crowds about the Ellipse last night, wounding four boys and a park policeman.

Several witnesses reported the man insulted a white woman. Others said he was heckled by youths.

Among those injured were:

Charles Arnold, 18, and his brother, Francis, 16, both of 501 L street northwest; George Vakas, 16, 499 C street southwest; James Calico, 18, 736 Fifth street northwest, and Policeman Samuel Millhouzer.

A man who said he was James Williams, 33, of 2029 E street northwest, was arrested. He was identified by victims.

Charles Arnold and Vakas were reported most seriously hurt.

Several other persons received torn clothing. Millhouzer grappled with the man.

Two persons were held up and robbed by bandits disguised as revelers. Earl Hazel, 1141 Eighth street northeast, reported the loss of $35. Mrs. Mary Minnix, 1413 Girard street northwest, lost $14 when her pocketbook was snatched.

Airports Watched For Spanknoebel

U. S. Customs Office Scan Ships for Circulars.

New York, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—While Federal agents watched metropolitan airports to prevent his departure, Heinz Spanknoebel's alleged activities as head of the German Nazi party's propaganda organization in the United States was being investigated by a Federal grand jury today.

At the same time it became known that another Federal agency—the customs office—has established a close surveillance over incoming vessels from German ports, to prevent the smuggling of Nazi literature into the country.

Governors End Farm Strike, Ask Inflation

Code, Pegged Prices Also Advocated in Report to President.

Des Moines, Oct. 31 (AP).—Discontinuance of the Farmers Holiday Association agricultural strike was announced today as the first definite result of a ten-State governors' conference here.

Meanwhile, governors of five Midwestern States and representatives of four others tonight signed a report to President Roosevelt urging the NRA code for agriculture, fixing minimum prices for basic farm products, and inflation of the currency.

Leo P. Crowley, chairman of the Wisconsin State executive committee, announced that Arnold Gilberts, president of the Wisconsin Holiday Association, had wired county holiday presidents to stop the strike. Gilbert's telegram read:

Dairy Program Favored.

"Governors' conference most successful. On our request, governors will present program to President. Open up factories and discontinue strikes, pending governors conference with President."

Gov. Schmedeman of Wisconsin also announced the conference had agreed to support a dairy program presented by him.

Gov. Olson of Minnesota challenged the embargo movement proposed by Gov. Langer of North Dakota.

Olson Raps "Capitalist."

The embargo plan, Olson said, "means you are trying to patch up the capitalistic system. I don't believe in the capitalistic system at all. . . . I don't believe an embargo will work. . . . It will enable the speculator to profit."

Gov. Langer replied: "We've got our wheat in North Dakota and the speculators aren't going to get it."

Farley Raps Tiger's Rule, Aids McKee

3 Candidates Find Little Material to Use in Accusations.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

New York Oct. 31.—The outstanding development of what was otherwise a dull day in New York's mayoralty campaign came from Rochester, where Postmaster General Jim Farley, to whom everyone has been looking for some declaration regarding his—and possibly the administration's—choice, announced flatly he is "against the present leadership of Tammany."

While there was nothing startling in such an expression on Farley's part, taken by itself, the statement was seized upon here as a tacit endorsement of Joseph V. McKee.

It was held that Farley, who, in addition to being Postmaster General, is national and State Democratic chairman, had come into the open in opposition to Mayor John P. O'Brien.

Obviously, "Big Jim" could not have meant this as support of Fiorello LaGuardia, the Republican Fusionist candidate. Therefore, say McKee supporters, Farley has declared himself for Joseph V. McKee, the recovery standard bearer, who all along has claimed administration backing.

Farley's statement did not go that far. All he said was:

"Every one aware of my political activities for the last two years knows where I stand. There are thousands of good Democrats in New York City, but I am against the present leadership of Tammany."

McKee Is Gaining.

Such a statement was quite in line with Farley's previous attitude, but, coming as it did at a moment when the McKee drive was gaining momentum, it was regarded here as extremely significant.

Contrary to expectations, the rival candidates today found little of which to accuse one another. The fireworks either have fizzled out—with no one badly signed—or are being reserved for closing outbursts before the election November 7.

One difficulty is that there is no real disagreement between the two leading candidates, Fiorello La Guardia and Joseph V. McKee, as to the major issue of the campaign—to wit, that New York City has been misgoverned for a long, long time.

Mayor O'Brien is committed to perpetuation of the system—which is why he is running a poor third in the betting.

McKee Has Handicap.

The major handicap under which McKee labors is popular belief that his election would not mean sufficient change in the system. La Guardia carefully has fostered the impression that the recovery party candidate, as a New York Democrat, has too many Tammany tags to be in a position to bring about a real revolution in the government of the metropolis.

Political observers who believe McKee will be much closer to LaGuardia on election day than he appears to be at present, expect McKee to continue to gain ground steadily from now on as a result of his frank denunciation of those who formerly bossed the controlling Democratic party here. He is gaining hourly.

La Guardia is being damned by his two opponents, first as a Republican, then as a Red. They can not seem to decide upon a choice of brushes with which to tar the fiery former representative. And all their attacks upon LaGuardia can not offset one outstanding fact in which

C. A. Hardee Put in Charge Of 7 Banks' Frozen Assets

Former Gov. Cary A. Hardee, of Live Oaks, Fla., yesterday was appointed receiver to replace conservators of the seven banks which were merged in the Hamilton Bank by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T O'Connor

Hardee's appointment, said to have been dictated by President Roosevelt because of friendship, follows announcement of a Treasury Department plan to speed liquidation of the frozen assets of the seven banks, which released 50 per cent of deposits when the Hamilton Bank opened.

Meanwhile a Treasury Department plan for expansion of the Washington Mechanics-Mount Vernon Savings banks merger to include the Franklin National Bank also was revealed yesterday.

Hardee, who is president of the Commercial Bank of Live Oaks, has long been a friend of the President, their acquaintanceship starting when both were members of the governors' conference. The Florida appointee was secretary of the conference for 10 years.

Approximately $8,000,000 still is tied up in the seven merged banks. The receiver will have authority to appeal to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for loans.

The seven banks over which Hardee will exercise control are: Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., District National Bank, Washington Savings Bank, Northeast Savings Bank, Woodridge-Langdon Savings and Commercial Bank, Potomac Savings Bank, Seventh Street Savings Bank.

Although certain Franklin Bank officials were opposed to the merger plan when it was first broached by the Treasury Department some time

U. S. to End Racket Rule Of Business

Crime Grip Upon Labor Organizations Also to Be Smashed.

The Federal Government is about to open a major drive against commercial racketeering, Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, in charge of the Federal anticrime campaign, announced yesterday.

Keenan explained that the drive will throw the weight of law enforcement agencies against hoodlums and organizations which have tied up labor trades, terrorized business men and exacted a toll on legitimate business running into millions.

It is regarded by Keenan as the next, and one of the most important, steps to be taken by the Federal Government in its drive to root out organized crime. It may go to the extent of making new laws necessary.

Kidnaping Checked.

"We feel that we have put a pretty good check on kidnaping for the present," Mr. Keenan said. "This leaves us free to go ahead with the next major step in the drive against organized crime.

"This step will take the form of a concerted campaign against commercial racketeering. We are now making a thorough study on which to base our plans. When we have completed it we will go to work.

"We do not feel that commercial racketeering has increased, but we do know that it at least is as prevalent as ever. We intend to put a stop to it. This means that we will have to carry our drive far, reaching places that heretofore have not been reached, and we're going to do it."

The Assistant Attorney General, who aided consistently in guiding the Federal drive against kidnapers, said that in cases where existing laws are inadequate, he will go to Congress to ask laws that will achieve their purpose.

Labor Rackets Included.

It was learned authoritatively that the drive will include labor union racketeering, long a sore spot in the national industrial picture.

Commercial racketeering extends into nearly every line of business, and its levy extorted annually provides fat incomes for its participants. It has been particularly prevalent in the building industry and in certain lines of organized business such as the poultry trade and the artichoke trade.

It has grown to vicious proportions in the labor field, authorities have reported, where it extracts percentages from every laborer on certain jobs for "protection" and the privilege of working.

First Concentrated Attack.

The Federal Government, beyond sending a few gangsters to jail on income tax violations, has never made a concerted attack on this underworld grasp on business.

Success of the Government's efforts in dealing with kidnaping has led to the conviction in high quarters that commercial racketeering can be dealt with as convincingly.

The trial of the Hamm kidnaping case at St. Paul, opening next week, is the last of the kidnaping cases in which the Federal Government has taken part. Mr. Keenan will go to St. Paul for the trial, and expects to return to Washington to take up the racketeering campaign.

Fall of Grau's Regime Nears

Change in Government to Be Decided Today by Cabinet.

Havana, Oct. 31 (AP).—The secretary of the interior in the Cuban government said tonight a cabinet session has been called for noon tomorrow to consider a change in government and possible adoption of a parliamentary form.

The consensus was that Grau San Martin regime, in office less than two months, will make way for another one in not more than 48 hours.

At present Cuba has two choices, either to retain President Grau with a coalition government, including a legislative commission of 42, or to eliminate Grau and retain the present from of government with Col. Carlos Mendieta, nationalist leader, as provisional president.

Guillermo Belt, former secretary of education, said tonight: "The government's fall is inevitable. A government in which its men are supported by the entire country is the only solution."

It was understood that Col. Batista and his army were in favor of a change and were willing to uphold Col. Mendieta.

Recovery Chiefs Show First Fear

Anxiety Is Due in Part to Lack of Response on Gold Move.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

For the first time since President Roosevelt entered the White House prominent members of his administration have become seriously disturbed over the state of public reaction to the "new deal" program, it became apparent yesterday.

This anxiety has been caused, it developed, not only by the failure of the country to respond to the President's efforts to raise prices through manipulation of the value of gold, but the expressed hostility on the part of some of the most ardent supporters of Mr. Roosevelt last year and since his inauguration until the last few days.

As a result some of the President's advisers believe that before leaving for his Warm Springs vacation he should deliver another of his "fire side" chats to the Nation with the purpose of clarifying the present situation and seeking to dispell the fog of uncertainty surrounding his latest monetary policies.

Faith Not Lost.

Neither the President nor his advisers have lost faith in their program, it was revealed after the usual executive council yesterday. The Cabinet and various recovery administrators were closeted with the President for almost two hours. No new step was under contemplation, it was explained. Instead efforts will be made to speed up the NRA, public works and credit programs, the conferees said.

It was regarded as significant, however, that the President detained for more than an hour after the others left the three key men in the recovery drive—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator; Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who also has charge of the public works program, and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

On leaving this trio was reticent about the meeting. Only Gen. Johnson would talk. He said he thought the NRA program was "coming along all right, but it could be much better." He added that his purpose in going West on a speaking tour later this week was to "correct the misunderstandings and the misrepresentations about what we are trying to do."

Summarizes Attitude.

These remarks of Gen. Johnson in effect summarize the attitude of most Administration leaders at this time, except possibly as to the program for manipulating gold prices, which apparently few of them knew anything about. Privately expressed, their attitude is that given time the Roosevelt program will bring the country back to economic normalcy. But they admit that the Nation is becoming restless and discouraged over the failure to achieve tangible results in the way of increased prices and sharp reduction of unemployment.

It is not conceded in Administration circles that the program, taken as a whole is at fault, but that the country expects too much in too short a period. President Roosevelt, it is argued, always has disavowed being a "miracle worker" and that furthermore great strides have been made in putting men and women back to work, raising prices and creating new purchasing power.

In some quarters it is felt that the confusion and uncertainty surrounding the plan to have the R. F. C. purchase gold have injured the entire recovery program, in that

Hunter's Mistake Kills Woman, Wounds Babe

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 31 (AP).—A mother was shot to death and her 7-month-old son was wounded by a Negro who was hunting in Amherst County woods this afternoon.

Mrs. A. H. Sampley, of Oklahoma, the mother, was traveling with her husband. Her son, William, was brought to Lynchburg Hospital tonight. He is expected to live. Hospital authorities said they learned Mrs. Sampley and her infant were in the woods taking a sun bath when the Negro, evidently thinking he saw some wild animal, opened fire.

Young Officers Freed In Mexican Army Plot

Mexico City, Oct. 31 (AP).—Minister of War Quiroga ordered the immediate release today of nine officers who confessed plotting a military uprising, because the officers are "young, inexperienced, and connected with no important elements."

The movement, allegedly in protest against low pay and slow advancement, was said by officials to be "lacking in importance."

NRA Program Held 'Puzzling' By Al Smith

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—The workings of the NRA program are "all very puzzling" says Alfred E. Smith in the November issue of the New Outlook, of which he is editor.

Retelling the story of Francis Scott Key as he "awaited the dawn to see if the American flag was still flying," the former Presidential Candidate writes "Today a good many patriotic people, scanning the horizon for the first light of returning prosperity, are trying to figure out whether the flag of the constitution still waves."

"It is all very puzzling," concludes Smith, "and the bewildered observer, hoping ultimately for an honest test of these issues in the courts, is further confounded by the editorial suggestion in a newspaper of wide circulation that the President could ask Congress to create a few more Supreme Court judgeships, and fill them with men sympathetic with the aims of the National Recovery Act

Fight on U. S. Age Bar Taken To Roosevelt

Head of House Committee Sends Letter Protesting 40-Year Limit.

Reversal by the President and Cabinet of a Civil Service Commission ruling, fixing 40 years as the Federal employment age limit, was urged yesterday by Chairman Cochran, of the House Committee on Expenditures in Government Departments.

In a letter to President Roosevelt, Chairman Cochran bitterly protested against the innovation, on the grounds it would add to difficulties of unemployed persons and constitute "a grave menace to the older worker."

Cochran indicated he believed the commission exceeded its authority. He intimated a decision threatening to bar thousands from Government service first should have been considered by the Cabinet.

Cochran's broadside immediately drew support from other prominent figures on Capitol Hill, including Chairman Jeffersn of the House Civil Service Committee, Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan; Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, and Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia.

Secretary Perkins says employes over the proposed age limit would not be barred from the Labor Department.

"From my point of view, the person over 40 or even over 50 is a more suitable and desirable employe for many posts than the person under 30," Miss Perkins said.

She pronounced elimination of the more mature person from industry "not a sound economic policy, a very short-sighted policy."

Soviet Official Discusses Treaty With Paris.

Paris, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, visited Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour here today, on the eve of his sailing for the United States tomorrow to open recognition negotiations in Washington.

It was understood they discussed a Franco-Soviet Russian commercial treaty and Russian debt negotiations.

NRA Compared by Dickinson To Beast Pictured in Bible

Chicago, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Senator L. J. Dickinson, Iowa, declared in a debate tonight that NRA is ill advised, "bad medicine for a sick Nation," selfish, unworkable, preposterous and socialistic.

Representative Charles West, Ohio, answered that NRA was a heroic measure adopted in an emergency to bring order out of chaos and whether or not it was the best plan, the fact remained it was the one definite course which received Nation-wide support.

The fiery Iowa senator, keynoter at the last Republican National convention, and West, youthful former Harvard professor, neither gave nor offered any quarter.

Dickinson quoted from Chapter 13 of the Book of Revelations. This chapter of the Bible tells of a beast rising out of the sea, having seven heads like a leopard, and ten horns, with feet like a bear, a mouth like a lion "and upon his heads the name of blasphemy."

This beast was followed by another that "came up out of the earth," with two horns like a lamb and "spake like a dragon." This beast had all the great powers of the first and caused the earth to worship the sea beast.

The debate was held in the Palmer House with Sir William Henry Beveridge and Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, British political leaders, and about 600 other noted persons in the audience.

Oddly, at the same time that Dickinson was launching a two-fisted attack upon NRA, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was speaking to a woman's organization in the next room.

The debate was a feature of the dinner meeting of the Economic

Surprise Voiced By Johnson Aid

Kirstein and Finch Are Among Five Quitting Advisory Board.

Five American industrial leaders will withdraw as members of the Industrial Advisory Board of NRA today, it was announced last night.

They are:

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co.

Louis Kirstein, of Filene and Sons, Boston.

Mystery Hides Moves.

Considerable mystery surrounded the announcements.

Moffett said he was quitting because he could give no time to the advisory board. He said his membership on the planning and coordination committee ruling the petroleum industry took all his time.

"I haven't been able to give any of my time to the recovery committee," he said. "I haven't been over there for a month. I thought I had better quit and let somebody have the place who could work at the job."

Swope said he was not "exactly resigning but was quitting because a new system had been decided upon, rotating membership of the board.

Both Moffett and Swope said there had been no discord or misunderstanding in the committee.

"Things have been going very well, indeed," Swope said. "Dissention? Oh, my goodness, no."

Michelson Mystified.

Charles Michelson, director of public relations of NRA, said he knew nothing of the resignations.

"I was with Gen. Johnson until after 6 o'clock tonight and he said nothing about it," he said.

Asked if there was a plan for rotating the membership of the board, he said he had heard something about such a proposal.

Teagle, Kirstein and Swope are members of the National Labor Board of NRA. They are expected

Frosh Ducked In Soph Clash

Freshman spirits at the University of Maryland were dampened last night when a dozen members of the class, abandoned by their fellows, were dragged from beneath beds in Sylvester Hall and cast into the chilly waters of Paint Branch.

But the honor of the sophomore class was not unscathed. Caught off his guard by a group of freshmen, Garner Brooks, sophomore president, also was ducked.

The incidents were a part of the "war" that has raged between the frosh and the sophomores since Monday night, when the youngsters rebelled against sophomore rules. Many members of both classes were nursing minor injuries.

Calm was restored temporarily while the class elected officers. John Jimmyer, Baltimore, was elected president of the freshmen, and Edward Fletcher, 1212 Blair road northwest, was chosen vice president. Other officers will be elected Thursday.

Gulf-Atlantic Canal Survey Begins at Once

If Found Feasible, Plan Will Employ 10,000 for Three Years.

Survey of the proposed waterway across north Georgia and Florida, shortening the route from Atlantic ports to the Gulf of Mexico by more than 500 miles, will be started immediately by Army engineers.

Public Works Administrator Ickes yesterday instructed the chief of Army engineers to make such a survey to determine the feasibility of the canal. It is estimated the canal will cost approximately $150,000,000 and will give employment to more than 10,000 men for three to five years.

The survey is the result of long agitation for a canal. Senator George, of Georgia, active in pushing the project, estimated it will cut 12 hours off the trip from Atlantic ports to New Orleans and Texas ports and that this canal would handle more traffic than the Panama Canal.

Roosevelt's Favor Claimed.

Senator George said he had consulted President Roosevelt about the project and that the President is favorable. He said $200,000 probably will be set aside from public works funds to make the survey. An appropriation for construction of the canal, if it is found feasible, probably will be contained in a new public works bill which Senator George said is sure to be enacted in the next session of Congress.

Senator George said there are no great physical difficulties since the land for the most part is flat and swampy. Water would be impounded to form a steady supply for the waterway.

Representative Deen, of Georgia, also active in pushing the project, said that besides being a waterway, the canal would be important in draining the land and of great benefit in the reforestation work.

One Survey Made.

The canal route already has been surveyed by private engineers and declared feasible by them. A channel 160 miles long, 200 feet wide and 38 feet deep is proposed.

Persons who have studied the canal project say that eventually ships could go all the way from Boston to Galveston by inland routes following the coast.

Insull Freed; Adopts Greece As Homeland

Athens, Greece, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull announced tonight that he would live out his life in Greece "as my own country."

A few hours before the Greek appellate court had dismissed a petition of the United States Government for his extradition to stand trial in connection with the collapse of his public utilities empire.

"I expected such a verdict," the white-haired millionaire said to the United Press. "Greek judges are ideal. I am more than satisfied and intend to stay the remainder of my life in Greece as my own country."

The packed courtroom was tense as the judges in their official robes filed into their places at the bench to read their verdict. Insull listened impassively and then smiled as friends congratulated him. Spectators cheered the verdict of acquittal and immediate release.

The court's decision was included in 10 pages of manuscript in which Insull's "important contribution" to the development of electric power was lauded. His acts in seeking to save his various companies were declared not fraudulent, the judges finding he was the victim of the world's general financial collapse.

Insull was warm in his praise, in return, and revealed that he intended to devote the rest of his life to work in Greece. He is 73.

"I hope by some financial combinations," he said, "to reciprocate the hospitality of this small but great country."

The verdict set forth that Insull was actuated by self-confidence of the highest degree and believed he could ameloriate the finanical situation in his utilities empire by loans to prevent the collapse that proved unavoidable.

Ford Will Submit Pay Data to NRA

was recognizing "collective bargaining" in its handling of the strikes.

The labor board chairman said a reply was expected from Dearborn the "early part of this week." Reminded that the reply had been expected last Saturday, and asked how much time he thought should be given, Senator Wagner commented:

"That will have to be decided later; there comes a time when there is no negotiating."

The principle of "collective bargaining," one of the three main provisions of the automobile code, was raised by Gen. Johnson against Ford when he declared the Government's boycott. The administrator, conferring at the White House with President Roosevelt, was not available for comment on the new developments and his usual Tuesday press meeting was put off until today.

Compilation Under Way.

The Ford company's compilation of hours and wages, generally considered to exceed code requirements, has been under way since October 18, long before Gen. Johnson's threat, the Associated Press learned at Detroit. Ford officials said they started amassing the statistics as soon as forms for the report were received. Gen. Johnson's statement here said all the manufacturers' figures were expected "not later than November 10."

Meanwhile the status of the Administration's boycott remained unchanged, pending a decision by Comptroller General McCarl on the protests of R. P. Sabine, Ford dealer, of 6720 Wisconsin avenue, who contends it would be illegal to throw out his low bids for 1,000 trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps and three cars for the Department of Commerce.

Since the case will probably await action ot Attorney General Cummings, who is not expected back in the city until Thursday, it was thought probable a delay would be allowed by mutual consent.

The Driscoll company's low bid was to have been rejected on the ground the concern had not signed an NRA agreement at the time the bid was submitted. Attorneys for the company stated the company complied with NRA requirements.

Ford Files Report.

Detroit, Oct. 31 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. revealed tonight that forms for automotive reports required by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce under the NRA code were received October 18.

Work of compiling the information has been going forward in the Ford offices since that date, a statement by the company said.

Appeal to Roosevelt.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 31 (AP).—J. Glenn Anderson, attorney for the striking employes of the Ford Motor Co.'s Edgewater plant, sent to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson tonight a list of the strikers' charges of company violations of the national recovery act.

The paper was addressed to President Roosevelt and asked that he act personally in behalf of the men.

The petition says the 1,500 organized workers sought to "negotiate with officials of the company as to working hours, rates of pay, and conditions of their employment," according to the NRA, and "were refused a hearing."

Chicago Buys Fords.

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—Without mentioning Henry Ford's dispute with the NRA, the City Council finance committee today recommended purchase of 38 new Ford automobiles from a Chicago dealer.

Evasion of Code Intent in Some Cases Hinted by Early Returns.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Returns from the NRA census of employers indicates from fragmentary analysis that the President's reemployment agreement and the codes have increased substantially pay rolls and the number of persons employed, but have tended to decrease the average wage per employe, the United Press learned yesterday.

To a considerable extent, the decrease in average wage is normal with expansion, since most new employes naturally would be in the lower-wage brackets, and many of them are on a part-time basis. But in some cases the disparity is so great that evasion of the intent, if not the actual provisions, of the NRA and the codes is indicated.

In a few cases increases in the number of employes has been accompanied by an actual decrease in the total pay roll, due to shortening hours of work.

The indication from the cases examined so far—and they are too few to be used as a basis for a definite forecast of what the complete census will show—is that though substantial increase in total purchasing power of wage-earners as a group has been accomplished, at the same time the NRA program has become more of a "spread-the-work" movement than was intended.

The theoretical original goal was to decrease hours of work without decreasing total pay of individuals already employed.

Returns so far examined make it evident that though hourly wages have risen markedly, a substantial number of men and women employed before the NRA and the codes became effective are now earning less money than they did before, so that for them recovery has meant sacrifice, and they are little better off than they would have been under the "spread-the-work" movement started during the Hoover Administration.

He was reported missing by his father, Charles Bradley, general accounting office employe, who said the boy is about 4 feet 6 inches tall, slender and wore gray knickers and a blue blouse. He has a small scar on his right cheek.

lies his greatest chance of victory—he, at least, is not Tammany's choice nor even the Tiger's second guess.

With all three candidates scheduled to speak tonight from the same platform in Carnegie Hall, earlier developments of the day appeared likely to have little bearing upon the result.

McKee, speaking at an advertising club luncheon, refuted LaGuardia charges he is subject to boss rule by citing the City Hall record of his tenure of office as mayor following the enforced departure of Jimmy Walker, and as president of the board of aldermen.

The Recovery party candidate produced data which he said showed how he tried repeatedly to curb Tammany rule of extravagance. He also pointed to his adverse votes at meetings of the board of Aldermen, when he voted steadily against costly enterprises.

There was also an intriguing contretemps as a result of the avowed intention of Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, former "silk stocking" Representative from New York, who had been closely associated with Ogden L. Mills in the last campaign, to go to McKee, a personal friend.

McKee's backers claimed the fusionists were slipping badly as a result of having injected racial and religious issues into the three-cornered strife. It is claimed La Guardia has overreached himself in attacking McKee's character as a private citizen and public official.

All in all, it was a McKee day.

Roosevelt Is Sent Plea in Age Fight

turity of judgment and a willingness to modify the personality to meet the situation, that is not found in the young," she said.

"The person over 40 has already built himself up. He is no longer motivated, as the young, by the impulse of self-development. There is a higher labor turnover among young people because if they are making good they are offered better jobs.

Objects to Labor Turnover.

"A constant influx of the young and stirring is necessary," she said. "The young have brilliant ideas. The middle-aged have the maturity of judgment which prompts them to examine both sides of a question."

Meanwhile, observers predicted the American Federation of Labor would enter the controversy because the recent Washington convention voted to oppose policies of establishing age limits for hiring workers.

Senator Couzens declared qualifications rather than age should govern in selection of new employes.

"There is no justification," he asserted, "for such a young age limit. All citizens who are competent and can pass examinations should be eligible."

Harry B. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission chairman, wrote Cochran the age limit reductions were drafted because appointing officers generally selected the youngest on lists in the belief "the younger person will learn more quickly the details of his or her particular job and be more efficient."

Examination of typists and stenographers alone between the ages of 40 and 50, Mitchell reported, would mean added expense to the Government of $15,000 or $20,000, besides special retirement fund expenditures.

"Unfair," Says Babcock.

"I have before me," Mitchell disclosed, "a synopsis of the opinions of the appointing officers. Out of 21 interviewed, all put 40 years as the maximum desirable age limit, with the exception of one, who says 45 should be the maximum.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Federal Employes, termed the new age limits "unfair."

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, indicated he was in accord with the commission.

"We do not understand," he said, "that the Civil Service Commission has any intention of fixing a lower entrance age for all classes of civilian positions in the Federal service.

Mrs. Coolidge Pays Visit to New Heir

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, widow of the President, paid her first visit today to her first grandchild, Cynthia Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge slipped quietly into the New Haven Hospital and spent about an hour with the 3-day-old baby and its mother, Florence Trumbull Coolidge.

She drove to New Haven from her home in Northampton, Mass., and went first to the offices of her son John, the new father. He accompanied her to the hospital.

Insurance Killer of 5 Doomed To Guillotine by French Court

Aix-en-Provence, France, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—George Alexander Sarrejani was sentenced today to die on the guillotine for killing five persons, including two women, for insurance.

Two sisters, Philomena and Catherine Schmidt, were acquitted of murder, but convicted of bearing false witness.

The trio were charged with the murder of Louis Chambon, an unfrocked priest, and his mistress, Blanche Ballandraux; "hastening of the death" of a girl stricken with tuberculosis, and a series of insurance and other frauds climaxed by murder in at least two instances.

"None knows how many murders were really committed by this diabolical trio in the course of their insurance swindles," the prosecutor said.

Agassiz, B. C., Oct. 31 (AP).—"Aunt-less Dereen," white leghorn pullet, equaled the world's record in egg laying today by depositing her 357th egg in 365 days.

The achievement placed her on a par with No Drone 5-H, owned by W. Whiting, of Port Kells, B. C. The eggs which brought fame to the 1½-year-old fowl scaled 26½ ounces to the dozen, maintaining her record of consistently laying larger-than-average eggs.

Until last Saturday, M. H. Ruttledge, of Sareis, B. C., had hope the leghorn would set a new world's record, but Dereen failed to lay on Saturday and so missed the opportunity. She laid Sunday and yesterday.

U. S. Finances Held "Glorified Housekeeping"

Mrs. Roosevelt in Chicago Speech Asks Women to Banish Fears.

Chicago, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, as principal speaker at women's day at the World Fair, today called on women of the Nation to banish fear as part of their contribution to recovery.

"Being afraid never did any one good," she said. "I know that it is a time when many of us are afraid for the future. I can not understand it very well because I think it is one of the most exciting times to be alive in.

"Years ago when I was a child," she said, "Theodore Roosevelt used to take all of us younger relatives on camping trips and walks. I was a nervous child and always afraid of something. 'When you are good sports,' he said, 'you may be afraid but you never show that you're afraid.'

"The way to make any movement successful is to know every step of the way. We women are frightened sometimes by the mere sound of the word 'economics.' That is only one of hundreds of things we must know if we are really going to understand our Government."

The complications of Government financing which Mrs. Roosevelt said most women were afraid to study are "glorified housekeeping."

"Just look upon it as a little more elaborate and complicated than your own housekeeping. But before you go before any body of men and ask for money, be sure you know where that money could come from."

Welcomed By Mayor.

know that Mrs. Roosevelt is working the same as the rest of us," he said. "In behalf of Chicago and the State, I want to thank her for her visit, and to ask her to take back to Washington the message that we are hitting on all six and are 100 per cent for Roosevelt."

Artist Quits Jail, But Forgets Hat

Barclay Leaves in Hurry After Court Action.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—McClelland Barclay, famous artist who has spent the last five days in the county jail for alleged failure to pay back alimony to his first wife, was freed by court order today. He left hurriedly, forgetting his hat.

Barclay, noted for his magazine cover illustrations, obtained his freedom without having to post the $35,000 demanded at the time of his arrest. His former wife, Nan Barclay, charged he was preparing to flee the country to escape paying alimony.

He was permitted to leave the jail on an order signed by Judge Frederick M. Peasley, of superior court, who said Mrs. Barclay had failed to file evidence supporting her body writ against the artist.

Alaska Awaits Another Gold Rush in Spring

Territory Governor Sees High Price as Lure to Miners.

Seattle, Oct. 31 (AP).—Revival of gold prospecting in Alaska, with more miners on the creeks next spring than for many years, John W. Troy, governor of Alaska, predicted today as a result of the high price for the metal.

Close to half a billion dollars in gold has been taken out of Alaska since the Russian flag was lowered at Sitka 66 years ago. Uncle Sam paid $7,200,000 for that northern area. Some said he was foolish. But in that more than half a million square miles there still lies plenty of gold, Gov. Troy said.

"I expect to see more prospectors on the creeks next spring than for many years," he said.

"Why? The Administration's new gold price, many dollars more than a few months ago.

"It will be profitable for men to go back to claims they once abandoned because costs of production were too high.

"We have had more inquiries from men contemplating investing new capital in Alaska than ever before," he declared.

Gov. Troy said large interests are waiting to see if the Government will take necessary measures to stabilize the price of gold, but everybody believes the market price will not go below $31 an ounce.

The output of gold, he predicted, will be "enormously larger next year when the beneficial effects of the higher price of the yellow metal will be felt."

Harrison Plan In Gold-Buying Avoids Breach

But Program to Be Given President for Study Limits Purchases.

By Elliott Thurston.

Treasury and Reserve System officials expect to submit to President Roosevelt today a plan drafted by George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, to have the Bank of England and Bank of France act as fiscal agents of the New York Reserve Bank in purchase of foreign gold on such a moderated scale as to mean virtual abandonment of the original program of the President's commodity dollar advisers.

Whether the White House will acquiesce is uncertain, but a crisis now has been reached in which the choice is between open international currency warfare, entailing a break with the British, French and other foreign governments, as well as a serious disruption in the President's advisers, and a restriction of gold buying to such limits that foreign currencies will not be imperiled by the drive to force the dollar down.

Administration officials who spent many hours yesterday striving for moderation and clarification are hopeful that the President will adopt the moderate course, even though it confesses surrender of avowed purposes to manipulate foreign as well as domestic gold prices in an attempt to force commodity prices upward.

Conversations between Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, British representative here, on war debts, and Treasury and Reserve authorities, and private communication with the Bank of England have succeeded so far in developing the certainty that the British will not accede to any program of driving the dollar down at the sacrifice of the pound.

Any foreign gold-buying operation, therefore, in which the Bank of England would act for the New York Reserve Bank would have to be so restricted as to involve no serious upset of the pound. An idea held by some of the President's monetary advisers that the British could be forced to drop their stabilization or equalization fund altogether in favor of turning the pound and dollar loose to find their own levels has found no responsiveness among the British so far.

Administration officials, while extremely circumspect in discussing the situation, stressed yesterday their belief that a compromise would be worked out that would involve collaboration between the central banks and definitely banish the threat of a war on the exchanges. Such collaboration could not be construed at this time as stabilization, it was said, but as an avoidance of disruptive currency competition through gold-buying operations.

While this is admittedly inconsistent with the Administration's avowed objectives, it was represented as the probable way out of the present dilemma, depending upon whether the White House will approve. In the meantime the Reconstruction Finance Corporation reported it is going ahead to set up machinery to buy foreign gold, and Chairman Jesse Jones said purchases would begin within a few days.

Market Drops Again.

Contrary to expectations of commodity dollar proponents who are sponsors for the President's recent monetary experiments, the markets yesterday went down instead of up. To their surprise, the London price of gold was 43 cents less than the day before, despite the promises of American buying. The only explanation offered by the commodity dollar advocates was that foreign speculators were at the bottom of the reverse thus implied for the gold-manipulation theory.

For a sixth successive time, the President's gold triumvirate, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Acheson, Jones and Henry Morgenthau, jr., advanced the price for newly-mined domestic gold to a new high, yesterday's figure being $32.12, 16 cents over the day before and $1.07 above the world price. Again this price posting was as impotent as it has been all along in stimulating commodity levels. Commodity markets slumped once more. Stock market trading was light. Wheat was off as much as 2¾ cents. Cotton was unresponsive. In London the pound was stronger than the day before, an opposite effect from what was expected by the variable gold dollar exponents.

Conference Is Delayed.

Leith-Ross, accompanied by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, called at the White House in midafternoon only to discover that owing to a secretarial mix-up an appointment arranged with the President was scheduled for today instead. They quickly departed. While the debts are the ostensible reason for the appointment, the gold situation is inextricably interwoven, so much so that the debt talks are temporarily, at least, at a complete standstill.

Administration officials flatly deny recurrent reports that the British negotiators are going home, and look for continuance of the so far fruitless conversations. As yet, every avenue explored has led to nothing tangible. No concrete offers on either side have been discussed, despite various surmises to the contrary, according to authoritative information.

JAMES A. HESS, 2807 Kanawha street northwest, pictured looking at a 1678 Spanish piece-of-eight, obtained from a sailor in Panama. Inset: The coin.

A piece-of-eight, hammered into form by a Spanish silversmith almost 300 years ago, is now the prized possession of James A. Hess, 2807 Kanawha street, Chevy Chase. Mr. Hess, now in Washington on a vacation, obtained the coin from a soldier in Panama, where Hess is stationed as an employe of the Panama Canal. He is a brother of George W. Hess, director of the Botanical Gardens.

The coin, dated 1678, was picked up by an infantryman exploring along the old Crucus Trail, a cobblestone highway built by the followers of Cortez, connecting Porta Bella, on the Atlantic Coast of Panama to Panama City. The soldier, Hess says, found three coins.

One side of the coin bears a coat of arms, probably from some Spanish province, or perhaps, Hess suggests, from some feudal estate in Andalusia or Castille. Small animals appear on six separate squares. The other side of the coin bears a cross.

"The Spaniards made their coins in crude forges and when they thought too much silver was in them, they merely chipped an edge off," Hess said.

Hess is collecting scientific exhibits and data to take back to Panama with him in December for school children and junior college students there. An amateur astronomer, he has founded and directs the small observatory in the Canal Zone.

He intended to keep his possession a secret, but became interested in The Post's new historical cartoon strip, "Pieces of Eight." So he told about his "find."

Big Mysterious Gold Purchase Excites London

Traders Suspect Hand of U. S. in African Deal; Dollar Weakens.

London, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—The mysterious purchase of $1,426,500 worth of South African gold by an unidentified operator weakened the dollar on European exchanges today.

The British Government let it be known that it desired no currency war with the United States, and persons close to the Bank of England sought to discover who made the gold deal.

In Paris, French authorities reiterated they desired no currency battles with the United States and would not be drawn into such a controversy, either directly or through the pound sterling.

The dollar opened strong here, but weakened when the South African deal was made known, the pound going up to $4.78, an advance of 2½ cents from the opening. It closed at $4.77 against yesterday's close at $4.80½ during a day of wide fluctuations.

In Paris, desultory trading gave the dollar a slight rise, the opening quotation being 16.95 francs to the dollar, or 5.899 cents a franc, as against yesterday's closing of 16.79 francs. It closed today at 17.69 francs to the dollar.

The mysterious buyer took 115 bars of newly minted South African gold as soon as the market opened. The price was 300,000 pounds, or $1,426,500 at the prevailing rate.

The "world rate" here was 91.5 cents under the American price set at Washington yesterday, which was $31.96 an ounce.

Speculation was general as to whether the United States was involved in the South African deal. Dispatches from Washington emphasized this was impossible because the machinery for buying gold abroad has not yet been set up ago, discussions relative to this merger have been resumed.

It has been the intention of Franklin Bank officials to reopen the institution independently, and the Treasury Department submitted a plan with this object in view. This plan, however, did not meet with the entire approval of the bank's officials, and they have submitted a counter proposal, now the subject of joint discussion.

Consummation of the three-bank merger would result in an institution having approximately $8,000,000 in deposits, based on the Comptroller of the Currency's call for statements as of December 31, 1932.

Franklin National Bank, which has been restricted since the National bank holiday, was organized in 1914. Its main office is located at Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and it has a branch office at 1111 Connecticut avenue, opened in 1924.

Waiver forms will be mailed depositors of Mount Vernon Savings Bank today. On these they will signify agreement to the trusteeing of not more than 65 per cent of their deposits as part of the plan to merge with Washington Mechanics' Savings Bank. Waivers representing 75 per cent of the total deposits must be obtained to bring about the merger.

Funeral of Gypsy Is Watched by Kin

Picturesque Rites Draw Crowd to Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The picturesque gypsy funeral ceremony took place at Mount Olivet Cemetery yesterday when the body of John Steve, son of Baco Steve, head of the Stevens tribe, was buried.

Several hundred onlookers witnessed the last rites of the youth. A score of tribesmen were present at the earlier service in Timothy Hanlon's parlors at 641 H street northeast.

A group of kinsmen remained at the grave until sundown.

The boy was buried with a watch, bottle of perfume, comb and a mirror. They were selected by his father as his most valued possessions.

After the funeral, members of the tribe assembled to break a fast which had lasted since the death. During the fasting period only bread and water is taken.

Principals in Age Limit Battle

Man's Judgment Is Soundest At 40 to 50, Says Sociologist

Dr. Willard Gives Views on Civil Service Plan for Age Limit.

The average ditchdigger has done his best work at 40 years of age, but when it comes to types of work requiring mature judgment a man does his best work from 40 to 50, asserted Dr. Dudley Willard, professor of sociology at George Washington University, commenting on the proposed limiting of Civil Service examinations to persons under the age of 40.

He believes this because "very often the most valuable people to the Government are older since they have maturity of judgment. Ability depends upon individuals and it will not crop up at 40 if it wasn't there before. But a man at 50 is stabler than he was at 40."

Denied Fresh Start.

Excluding persons over 40 from Civil Service examinations means that a man is denied the right of a fresh start in life. And Dr. Willard believes that a man's chances after 40 are pretty slim.

"The general trend in industry is against older people," he said. "Where men past 40 have got new jobs necessitating new work they receive lower salaries and their attitudes undergo a change for the worse. Younger men are more pliable and the possibilities for advancement before 40 are greater."

The proposal to make 40 the age limit for taking civil service examinations would chiefly affect the various scientific bureaus, some of whose personnel are barely through training at 40. But in most cases each department has its own regulations dealing with the matter.

Actual development, as far as basic intelligence is concerned, ceases at the age of 18, said H. F. Hubbard, executive officer of the department of psychology of George Washington University and one of the country's foremost experts on personnel problems.

Experience Increased.

"But increased experience plus social contacts at the age of 40 more than compensate," he said, "for the fact that intelligence hasn't developed between 20 and 40.

"Studies show that adults in the 40's can learn practically as well as adolescents in their 'teens. Intelligence begins to decline at the age of 70. So that the average man is probably as efficient at 40 as at 20 or 30."

Readjustment in older people when denied work, open to those younger than themselves, is hard to attain, Dr. Willard said. From the broad angle of the Government's part in the recovery program, older people suffer more from work shortage. Youngsters are even harder hit while the middle-age group are the best off.

Dr. Willard said civil service restrictions as to age must operate where executive ability is necessary.

Mrs. Lon Chaney Dies in California

Servant Lately Applied to Marry Her.

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Hazel Chaney, widow of Lon Chaney, noted character actor of the movies, died at a hospital today following an illness of several months.

Heiress to the $550,000 Chaney estate, she had been at the hospital several weeks. Her presence became generally known a few days ago when John Jeshke, confidential employe of the Chaney family for years, applied at the courthouse for a license to marry the widow. He was told she would have to appear to sign the application.

At that time, Mrs. Chaney's physician said he would not give permission for her to be married, because of her grave condition.

Big Rail Order Will Follow Pact on Price

850,000 Tons for 50 Lines Estimated to Cost $31,000,000.

As a result of the compromise agreement on the price of steel rails, reached by President Roosevelt and representatives of four of the country's largest steel manufacturers, orders for about 850,000 tons of rails to be used by about 50 railroads will be placed within a few days.

With the price fixed at $36.37½ a ton for first-class rails, the order will amount approximately to $31,000,000 and will be sufficient to keep the rail-making mills in operation at capacity about two weeks.

The first step is to lend money to the railroads to finance the orders, and arrangements for the loan are being worked out by Secretary Ickes and the Public Works Administration. Ickes said he did not believe it would be necessary to form a separate corporation to make the loans. He indicated the interest rate may be 4 per cent and that the loans would be amortized over a 20-year period.

The companies with which the orders will be placed are the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the Inland Steel Co. and the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

Japan to Avoid War on Russia

Tokio Army Minister Seeks Far East Conference by World Powers.

Tokyo, Wednesday, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Japan's minister of war, Lieut. Gen. Sadao Araki, said flatly today:

"Japan has no intention of waging war with the U. S. S. R. I hope that all misunderstandings of this score will be removed completely."

Gen. Araki's assertion followed admission that he may ask the Japanese cabinet to call a Far-Eastern conference of World Powers.

The assembly would be at Tokyo. Any country interested in the Far East would be asked to send delegates. An agreement touching upon Japan's policy in Manchuria would be broached, it was understood.

Gen. Araki intimated that Japan was forced in the name of preparedness to build her army to parity with that of Russia, and her navy to approximate the United States fleet.

THE rights of Federal employes, such as they are today, have been won only after a period of intense education and the struggle and stress of many a political battle. The sick leave and similar humane concessions, won by the employes, have served to bring about a retroactive impression that the lot of the Government employes today is a pampered one.

Unqualifiedly that is not so. Federal employes, as Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, recently pointed out, "have been faced with the tragic anomaly of their employer straining every resource to improve conditions of other wage earners, while at the same time perpetuating injustices upon its own employes which it was the first to condemn in private employers."

Mr. Steward's denunciations are justifiable, in view of the severe wage cuts of from 15 to 50 per cent which have been taken by Federal Government employes during the past three years, and which as yet have not been rectified.

What is the reason for this strange condition? It lies solely, we believe, with invidious propaganda based on fundamentals which no longer hold. The Government would do well to pause in its work of raising the wage levels and labor standards in industry throughout the country and pay a little attention to the tens of thousands of its own employes, who perform a multitude of tasks at salaries incompatible with similar work for private employers.

We heartily indorse the federation's stand in striking at a palpable injustice. We have no grievance with cutting salaries of the higher bracketted political appointees, but do strenuously uphold the civil service low-paid employes the modicum of rights which they have won and now are on the verge of permanently losing. — Commerce and Industry Magazine.

That's Halloween.

When watch dogs howl and cats' eyes gleam;
When black bats flap and night owls scream
That's Halloween.

When plates and glasses fall and break;
When chill winds moan until they make
The very floors and windows shake—
That's Halloween.

When doorbells ring by unseen hands;
When goblins roam the woods in bands,
And ghosts take charge on sea and land—
That's Halloween.

In spite of so much spooky stuff,
Which may at times get slightly rough,
We never will get quite enough
Of Halloween.

Halloween Dance.

I stood in a graveyard on the hill
And the moon was pale and the wind was still,
When out of their grave in the dead of the night

While all around me in the gloom
Peered those who bore the stamp of doom;
Now one before me made a pause
A fat old freak named Marriage Clause.

"Oh, dance with me a rigadoon,"
She begged, "Come, dance beneath the moon!"
But a spook cut in—Government Pay—
And they hoofed in a really scandalous way.

Retirement Pay and Furlough, too,
Were dancing and kicking with much ado;
While Annual Leave, with one game leg
Did a tap atop of an empty keg.

I shivered and shook at the specters grim
And my hair stood up and my sight grew dim,

Came a wailing wind and a lightning flash,
And the ghosts vamoosed in a terrible crash.
My wobbling knees would not behave
And I swooned atop an open grave.

Commerce.

Dim Sight Defense In $500,000 Note

Estate Says Millionaire Couldn't Read Figures.

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Attorneys defending the $7,000,000 estate of the late Col. J. B. Lankershim against a suit for $500,000 by Mrs. Irene Herbert presented evidence today to show that the aged capitalist's sight was so dim when he signed a promissory note for that amount that he could not read the figures.

A gray-haired, bespectacled bookkeeper, H. O. Moulton, testified he always had to point out to Lankershim where to sign checks and documents.

Mrs. Herbert, former housekeeper, said the note was given to pay for her services.

Wiggin Firms Cut His Taxes, Probers Hear

Chase Stock Sold Short Just Before Crash, Senators Told.

Private operations of Albert H. Wiggin, enabling the former Chase National Bank head to minimize income tax payments and carry on a profitable securities business apart from activities as Chase board chairman, yesterday were inquired into by the Senate Banking Committee.

The inquiry disclosed a former New York Federal Reserve Bank chairman, Gates W. McGarrah, and 10 Chase National Bank officials, once served on directorates of Wiggin's privately controlled companies.

It developed large borrowings from Chase National Bank, short sales in Chase stock just before the 1929 stock market crash, and underwriting syndicates in which Shermar, one of the Wiggin companies, shared in a $12,201,109 profit with Arthur Cutten, Chicago trader; Harry F. Sinclair, oil operator; Blair & Co., and Chase.

Looking further into Chase National Bank loans, Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, told how the bank loaned nearly $200,000,000 to syndicate accounts between 1928 and 1933. Harvey C. Couch, now a Reconstruction Finance director, was one of the managers of a syndicates that borrowed $2,795,000 from Chase toward a $10,000,000 trading operation in Seaboard Air Line stock, Pecora said.

Pecora asked if any of the huge loans made by Chase to trading syndicates were reported as "brokers' loans" to the New York Federal Reserve Bank. Wiggin was unable to say. Pecora contends such loans should be reported as "brokers' loans."

Early testimony charged Wiggin organized three Canadian corporations, the Selcott, Medfield and Greenwich corporations in 1925, primarily for tax purposes.

Pecora brought out that Wiggin anticipated the 1929 market crash by a month. The banker testified he started selling Chase National Bank stock short in September, 1929, and by December 2 of that year was 42,506 shares short.

Wiggin denied there was anything "unethical" in trading short in his own bank's stock. Asked by Pecora if the careful timing of his short sales indicated he had "read the financial skies," Wiggin insisted:

"I was not that wise."

The witness came in for sharp criticism by Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, for the bank's policy of extendnig loans to its own officials, particularly for bank stock purchases.

Wiggin testified Chase permitted employes to buy Chase stock on an installment plan for $425, which had been issued to shareholders for $325, Chase netting the $100 profit.

He said this was doing the employes a "favor" as the stock was selling for more than that in the market.

Wiggin read a prepared statement denying huge profits by his personal companies between 1917 and 1933 from accounts participated in with Chase Securities Corporation. Net losses by his personal companies during that period from these operations netted $5,139,697, he said.

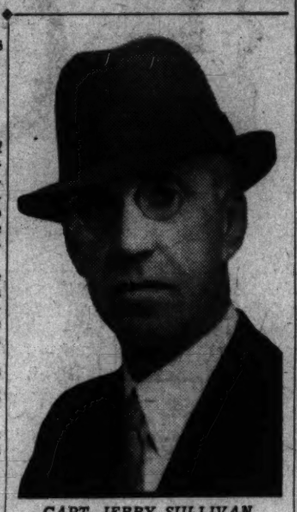
George Beban's Estate Appraised at $397,524

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—George Beban, motion picture actor and producer, left a net estate of $397,524, when he died October 5, 1928, a transfer tax appraisal filed today showed.

He left $5,000 to the Actors' Fund of America. A brother, Louis E. Beban, of San Francisco, received $20,000 and Florence E. Dax, of Los Angeles, got $5,000.

Veteran Fire Captain Quits After 28 Years of Service

Jerry Sullivan Recalls Horse-Drawn Engines of Old Days.



CAPT. JERRY SULLIVAN.

Capt. Jerry Sullivan, a veteran of the Fire Department, who remembers well the days when horse-drawn engines clanged and clattered down Washington streets to fight fires in a more picturesque era, retired from active duty yesterday.

In 1905 he was appointed to the department as a watchman, and a short while later he became a private at old Engine House No. 8. He was made a sergeant in 1910, and in 1918 he became a lieutenant.

For meritorious service he was promoted to a captaincy in June, 1927, and placed in command of Engine House No. 25.

Two of the most spectacular fires that Capt. Sullivan helped fight were Market House blaze, at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, in 1905, and the Boys' Reform School fire a few days later.

Capt. Sullivan now plans to travel, he said last night.

Under the rotation of membership plan, it was said, the committee will have a membership of about 12, serving for two, three and four-month periods. It was explained that this would avoid the necessity of the members taking too much time from their own business.

Groups Advise NRA.

The industrial advisory committee is one of three boards set up to advise the NRA. The others represent labor and consumers.

Moffett became a member of the industrial advisory committee last July following his resignation as a vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. His resignation followed a sharp company fight over policy and a disagreement over whether he should serve as a member of the committee.

At the time of his resignation from Standard Oil, Moffett said he considered an offer of appointment to the committee in the nature of a command.

Surprise to Roper.

Secretary Roper, to whom the resignations would be submitted, said he had heard nothing about them.

The dispute in the New Jersey company was between Moffett and Teagle. Teagle already was chairman of the industrial advisory committee.

In a statement following Moffett's resignation he said that he believed the public might misunderstand if two members of a board of nine represented the same company.

Teagle formerly served in a recovery organization when in 1932 he headed President Hoover's campaign to create jobs. When President Roosevelt was assured office he pledged his support to the administration.

Both Moffett and Swope last night said there was no disagreement or misunderstanding involved in the resignations.

Discord Denied.

"Everything is going very well, indeed," Swope said.

Gen. Johnson, Secretary Ickes and Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, conferred for an hour with President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon.

Duke Heiress, Hiding Identity Flees in Plane

Incognito Adopted in Fear of Racketeers and to Elude Cranks.

San Francisco, Oct. 31 (AP).—Miss Doris Duke, 20, tobacco heiress, who travels incognito to avoid cranks and possible underworld plots, left here by private airplane today when her identity became known. She had been sight-seeing in San Francisco four days.

The heiress to the $50,000,000 tobacco fortune left by her father, James B. Duke, departed for an unannounced destination, but airport attendants said the plane had clearance papers for Reno.

Interviewers were turned back by Walker Patterson Inman, of Reno, identified as her half-brother.

"Everywhere we go it's the same," Inman said. "She gets to see a few of the sights, go out to dinner a few times, and then her identity becomes known and we have to rush off somewhere else.

"We have to watch gangsters and racketeers. But that's not the worst of it. Cranks are the principal annoyance. Mail comes in by the bagful with all sorts of requests."

"Do you have much trouble keeping suitors away?" someone queried.

"No, not so much. The average eligible suitor doesn't want to appear to be a fortune hunter."

Inman said no photographing of Miss Duke was allowed because of the possibility of her being too easily identified.

Receiver Sought For Mack Sennett

Equity Suit Says Comedy Film Firm Owes Much.

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Appointment of a receiver for Mack Sennett, Inc., producers of film comedies, was sought today in an equity complaint filed by Leon Schlesinger, art studio proprietor, and William Hornbeck.

In the petition, the Sennett concern was said to have $2,385,839.88 obligations. It claimed the land, personal property, securities and goodwill of the Sennett concern were equal to this sum, but there was insufficient money on hand to meet current obligations.

In an answer, the corporation admitted the allegations and consented to appointment of a receiver to conserve assets.

Parent Credits Ransom-Secret To Mrs. Kelly

Urschel Move to Regain Missing $120,000 Seen in Blind Ad.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 31 (AP).—While Charles F. Urschel was reported negotiating for the recovery of $120,000 ransom, R. G. Shannon, Texas farmer convicted in connection with the kidnaping, promised today to disclose information on the missing money.

Shannon said he had no idea where the money is, but believed his stepdaughter, Kathryn Kelly, could help.

"Kathryn is the only one who could manipulate it so Mr. Urschel could get that money," Shannon said after he learned of a "blind" advertisement in a Fort Worth newspaper, believed in behalf of the Urschel family.

"If there's anything to it, Kathryn has something to do with it," Shannon said. Mrs. Kelly is serving a life sentence for the kidnaping in Cincinnati.

About $80,000 of the $200,000 paid for the millionaire's ransom has been recovered. On the farm of Cass Coleman Federal officers dug up $73,250 which had been buried in fruit jars by Kelly. Mark McKee, Fort Worth attorney, admitted he placed the ad and added, "it was a confidential communication between an attorney and a client."

The ad read:

"Well Digger, Wise County, Tex: Your letter about glass jars received. Will appreciate more details about proposed well. Will guarantee square deal. No publicity, and will execute contract to your satisfaction. Owner at present away, but I am his partner and can personally represent him. Address P. O. Box 1146, Oklahoma City, so that meeting can be arranged between us."

The postoffice box is that of the T. B. Slick-Urschel estate.

Naval Officer Faces Hit-and-Run Charge

Colon, Panama, Oct. 31 (AP).—Lieut. John H. Cross, U. S. N., was bound over to the Cristobal District Court under $1,000 bail today by a magistrate's court.

Lieut. Cross faces trial on a charge of hit-and-run driving growing out of the death of a brother officer several months ago. A naval court-martial exonerated him.

A Lead-Directing Double.

From time to time I have discussed in these pages the Double of a Slam contract which is made for the purpose of indicating to one's partner a better Opening lead than that which he might normally make. This inference, which was suggested by Mr. Theodore A. Lightner, a member of the victorious American team which I captained in the recent match for the Charles M. Schwab Trophy, usually directs the leader not to open his partner's suit against a Slam contract. It does not necessarily follow, however, that such a Double has no value when the doubling hand has not made any bid. In the following hand, which was played in one of the qualifying rounds for the United States Bridge Association Championship Finals in New York City, the Double was used to good purpose in indicating to the Opening leader hidden possibilities in a play which he could not safely have made without guidance from his partner.

Some ability for independent analysis is necessary on the part of the Opening leader if his partner's Double is to be successful. The Double clearly states, "Partner, stop. I know something about this hand which you do not know. It is up to you to determine what secret information I may have, and to make the most of it."

This is the hand:

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2◇	Pass
2♠ (1)	Pass	3♠	Pass
3NT	Pass	4◇ (2)	Pass
4NT (3)	Pass	6♠ (4)	Dbl. (5)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—There will never be a better opportunity for South to show this suit.

2—North wishes to confirm a rebiddable diamond suit; but mostly he wishes to make some sort of Slam try which will lead his partner to bid four notrump, a bid North can not make.

3—South shows two Aces and the King of a bid suit, in this case spades.

4—North knows his partner must hold the King of spades, so he reasons that only one trick should be lost on the hand. He can not bid five notrump, but has no reason to sign off, so he contracts for six spades immediately.

5—East has so many clubs that he can see the possibility of his partner's having only one. He also knows that it would be foolhardy ordinarily for his partner to open a singleton into a suit bid on his right. His Double in this case tells his partner to look for the hidden lead.

In this case West had no difficulty in realizing that his partner must have a long club suit and a sure trump entry. He opened his eight of clubs without hesitation, and East took the first round of spades with his Ace, returning a club, which West ruffed for the setting trick. This hand exemplifies a beautiful inference intelligently interpreted.

Tomorrow's Hand.

West, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Arab Outbreaks Feared at Haifa

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 31 (AP). Authorities acted today to prevent disturbances by Arabs during a ceremony formally opening the new Haifa Harbor, gateway to the Near East.

Streets were patrolled by soldiers and steel-helmeted police. Several Communists were arrested. A tense atmosphere prevailed as Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, British high commissioner, began the simple proceedings.

Crowds were prohibited, and only a few senior officials attended. Haifa has been a center of Arab demonstrations against increasing Jewish immigration.

"Remember, BANANAS are both fruit and vegetable," says

Miss RUTH CHAMBERS of the Washington Post Cooking School

"They're grand when yellow with green tip. This is exactly the right stage of partial ripeness for cooking as a vegetable—baked, broiled or sautéed especially with meats.

"They're great when yellow ripe, particularly for salads and desserts. This is the stage of all-round usefulness. For while readily digestible for eating as fruit, they are still firm enough for cooking.

"They're marvelous when fully ripe—yellow flecked with brown, delicious to peel and eat—to slice and serve with milk or cream, or combine with your favorite cereal."

A FAMILY TREAT—BANANA FRITTERS

Peel 6 bananas and cut in halves, first lengthwise, then crosswise. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons lemon juice and powdered sugar. Dip in fritter batter made as follows: Mix and sift together 1¼ cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt. Combine ⅔ cup milk with 1 well-beaten egg, then add to dry mixture, beating constantly. The batter should be thick enough to coat the fruit entirely. If too thick, add more liquid; if too thin, add more flour. Fry in deep hot fat (395° F.) until brown. Turn frequently while cooking.

"For extra pep and energy—BANANAS" is good counsel, now that new research is revealing what an excellent protective food bananas are—a good source of five of the six vitamins, as well as important minerals, and an aid in warding off acidity.

Cooperation or Competition?

Will the gold-buying policy of the Government result in international currency warfare or will it lead to cooperation between American and foreign authorities to control exchange fluctuations? Public opinion appears to be sharply divided on this question, but in the absence of an official statement to the contrary, the program has to be judged in the light of the monetary policies which the Administration has indorsed and has asserted its intention of following.

In his message of last July addressed to the World Economic Conference the President took the position that a stabilization agreement was not compatible with the kind of dollar which the United States is seeking—a dollar which "a generation hence will have the same debt paying and debt purchasing power which we hope to attain in the near future." About ten days ago the President reaffirmed his intention of securing for the country an ideal dollar of unchanging purchasing power that would not be too greatly "influenced by the accidents of international trade, by the internal policies of other nations and by political disturbances in other continents." First, however, he would raise commodity prices to a desired level by progressive depreciation of the gold value of the dollar. A detached dollar of this sort, isolated from the influences of the outside world, would appear to be the logical antithesis of a dollar moving in relation to sterling or any other foreign currency.

These official statements indicate, therefore, that the President is opposed to any form of currency stabilization at the present time. It is to be hoped, however, that the natural desire to follow a policy consistent with already announced plans and with previous professions will not be permitted to interfere with a cooperative currency arrangement that will enable the Administration to avoid an international contest in exchange depreciation from which, it is safe to say, none of the participants would escape unscathed.

The pound sterling has been tied more or less loosely to the franc since the United States suspended gold payments, and it is to the interest of Great Britain as well as France to resist an American policy which might force France to abandon the gold standard. Neither country, moreover, will be disposed to acquiesce passively in a plan to stimulate American export trade by progressive depreciation of the exchange value of the dollar at the expense of its own export trade.

Thus our choice lies between international cooperation to modify erratic exchange fluctuations, and independent action, likely to lead to an international line-up in which Great Britain and France together with their satellites, the sterling bloc and the present gold bloc countries, would be ranged defensively against the United States. Competition in devaluation probably would follow, which would draw all the participants into a maelstrom of fluctuating currencies, to the destruction of orderly trade among nations.

Man 500,000 Years Hence.

Perhaps it is too much to expect scientists always to keep their noses on the grindstone of research. Like other groups, they must have their moments of exhilaration. Hence, dull and dead facts of the past sometimes spring, under the deft touch of the scientific mind, into rare visions of the future. Years of study and research in geology and physics may blossom forth into a prediction as to how the world will end so many aeons in the future. Or a paleontologist may come forth with an imaginative glimpse of man a few hundred thousand years hence.

A case in point is an article in the current issue of Natural History by Dr. H. L. Shapiro, associate curator of anthropology for the American Museum of Natural History. The learned curator indulges himself in a bit of speculation as to man's characteristics 500,000 years hence. Being a scientist, he does not attempt to read the closed book of the future like a prophet, but merely to project past and present tendencies into the distant future.

In brief, Dr. Shapiro believes that a race of supermen will inhabit the earth in the year 501933. These highly developed types of homo sapiens, he says, will be taller, more inclined to baldness, and will have more brain capacity than man of today. Dr. Shapiro prudently refrains from estimating the approximate height of man in that distant day, but his references to the development of gigantic beasts, including the dinosaurs, in the Mesozoic Age seem to carry alarming inferences. Recent studies indicate that the stature of man is gradually increasing. If the estimated rate of increase during the last century should continue for 500,000 years, even the dinosaurs might be put to shame. But Dr. Shapiro does not leap to any such conclusions.

He does think, however, that heads in the distant future centuries will be more capacious and more bald; that teeth will give more trouble; that faces will be smaller and more recessive in profile, and that little toes may be missing. There seems to be some question as to whether the man of 501933 will be hahdsomer than his primate ancestors who are living today, but undoubtedly he will think so.

The 40-Year Age Limit.

It is evident that the new rule adopted by the Civil Service Commission, barring any one above 40 years of age from entering the Federal service, will meet with determined resistance in Congress and elsewhere. Mr. Cochran, chairman of the House committee on expenditures in executive departments, and Mr. Jeffers, chairman of the House committee on civil service, have announced their opposition to the rule. They will consider the subject in their respective committees, with a view to drafting legislation which will eliminate the obnoxious rule.

Mr. Cochran makes the point that this rule would have a pernicious effect throughout all industries. Opposition from the American Federation of Labor is to be expected, as its executive council recently went on record as declaring that "the policy of establishing an age limit for hiring workers is a grave menace to the older worker."

The tendency among Federal bureau chiefs is to reduce the age limit far below 40 years. The Department of Justice seems to have fixed a limit of 25 years in the employment of fingerprint clerks. Nurses over 30 are debarred from taking an examination for appointment in some cases. The Bureau of Home Economics fixes the limit at 30 years, which, Mr. Cochran contends, deprives the Government of the services of many women best qualified to serve.

In clerical work on machines, where celerity is almost the sole requirement, and where experience or judgment is not a requisite, it may be that younger workers exclusively should be employed. In the general run of the Federal service, however, some degree of experience and judgment in clerical help is a valuable help to executives. In many bureaus the real work is performed by experts who have spent years in gaining special experience.

Teaching Grownups.

The State of New York is providing school facilities for 60,000 adult pupils this winter on a practical and economical basis. Increased hours of leisure and unemployment have added to the demand for educational opportunities for many who have long passed the school age. A wide range of studies is provided in the State's vocational and extension program, with classes that include everything from the three R's to trades, arts, psychology and sociology.

All over New York City classes are held in all kinds of places where vacant rooms are available. The pupils range in age from seventeen to threescore and ten. There are trade schools which vary from the commercial school, enrolling several thousand students, to small groups struggling to become proficient in craft or art work. This movement was started last summer, when the enrollment reached 200,000, including those taking part in the recreational program of outdoor activities.

The benefits of the schools for grownups are not confined to those who are learning. Subsistence is forthcoming to 1,500 teachers who have been out of employment. Many able educators are included in the list of teachers for these adult classes. Professors and specialists who have enjoyed salaries of $10,000 are engaged at the uniform pay of $15 a week. Some of the classes are reported to be profiting by a type of teaching that equals university standards.

The State encouragement of musical appreciation through free concerts is still another branch of this educational work, which furnishes employment for several hundred musicians and gives enjoyment to many thousands. Concerts are held each week at the Museum of Natural History and the Brooklyn Museum in Prospect Park by the New York Civic Orchestra of eighty-six pieces. The music department often gives as many as forty-eight free concerts a week.

New York's latest educational innovation is attracting nation-wide attention, and its supporters hope it may lead to a general adult education movement organized on a national scale.

Restricting Machine Guns.

Ways and means of getting machine guns out of the hands of gangsters and desperate criminals are being considered by the Department of Justice. A memorandum has been prepared for Attorney General Cummings, with indications that the problem may be submitted to the White House.

Under the small arms and ammunitions code, the sale of machine guns is restricted to governmental agencies, banks, business associations and certain experts engaged in testing guns. Other individuals must secure permission from the Department of Justice before they can buy a weapon of this sort. Importers also are said to have agreed to limit their machine gun sales to legitimate channels.

The extent to which these measures will disarm criminal gangs remains to be seen. Indications are that some machine guns are being smuggled into the United States from Europe for criminal purposes. Many of these weapons doubtless are in the possession of gangsters at the present time.

Two methods of dealing with the situation have been suggested at the Department of Justice. One plan—confiscation of machine guns in the possession of those who have no legitimate use for them—has been widely discussed, but no action has been taken because the legality of such a measure is in doubt. There seems to be no such difficulty involved in the other plan, which is to require registration of all machine guns. Officials believe that if all weapons of this type now in use for legitimate purposes were registered, it might be possible to trace the unregistered guns by their serial numbers.

It is to be hoped that the Department of Justice may devise some means of recovering machine guns that are now in promiscuous use. Private citizens not engaged in law enforcement or special protective work have no legitimate need for such instruments of death.

Precinct Boys' Clubs.

Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, has met with general encouragement in the development of his plan to provide gymnastic and reading facilities at police precinct stations, for the use of boys in the respective neighborhoods. He proposes that boys' clubs be formed, with the cooperation of the police in each precinct, and that precinct station houses be provided with athletic equipment, books, magazines, and other club attractions. These clubs would be open every evening, and boys could be given athletic training by competent police instructors.

By this means, in Maj. Brown's opinion, a healthy friendship and cooperative spirit could be built up between the police and neighborhood lads. The boys would not be forced to join street gangs for amusement if recreation were available under congenial conditions. Instead of drifting into mischief and petty crime and finally into an attitude of antagonism to the police, Maj. Brown believes that boys would gladly avail themselves of gymnasium and reading-room facilities at the precinct stations, and would not only be kept from temptation but would become warm allies of the police.

The idea back of Maj. Brown's plan is fundamentally sound, and his proposal is worthy of serious consideration.

Maryland's Gretna Green.

The town of Elkton, Md., long has been noted in these parts for its "marrying parsons." Last month more than 500 couples sought the expeditious services of the local clergy. The methods employed to secure patronage by rivals for the tying of marital knots and the competition of transportation agents have reached a state of organization that recently caused the Associated Press to write it up as a "racket."

The great popularity of Elkton as a marriage mart is due to the fact that the only vitally important thing required of a prospective bride and bridegroom who desire to secure a marriage license is that they possess the fee. Ministers advertise their business on billboards. Taxi drivers and guides are expert in spotting prospective customers. Formerly they received commissions from parsons to whom they were delivered.

Not long ago the town council of Elkton decided that the reputation of the place was suffering from commercial methods employed in hustling couples to the parson. In several instances married couples were rushed into the churchman's presence before they could explain they were already married. The council passed an ordinance declaring it unlawful for ministers to pay taxi drivers or runners a fee for bringing in prospective victims.

This served merely to reverse the game. Resourceful drivers and runners combined to hire ministers on salary to marry those who were brought before them.

Maryland's Gretna Green suffered a decline in business during the depression, as much of its patronage came from the industrial centers of nearby Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey. But business is improving again, and October is expected to break the record. The A. P. finds that both the parsons and the taxi promoters look upon their business as just another industry, whose welfare is dependent upon organization and volume.

Painleve of France.

From the Boston Transcript.

Paul Prudent Painleve, who is dead in Paris, was three times premier of France and ten times minister. He was the last of the war-time premiers of the French republic. History will pass judgment upon the part he played as the head of the government in some of the darkest days of the World War, but the verdict, in some particulars, at least, may be anticipated. It will recognize his courage and appreciation of the need of the hour in going to the assistance of the defeated Italians. It will acknowledge the wisdom of his action in the formation of the allied supreme council, and the naming of Marshal Foch as one of its members. He yielded the leadership of the government to Clemenceau, who made the charge that the Painleve policy was one of defeatism. To what extent the charge was justifiable is debatable.

The fame of Clemenceau and Briand overshadowed that of Painleve. They stood forth as dramatic figures in years of great events. But this other man, who shared with them the responsibility of leadership in times that tried men's souls, was distinguished in fields to which they were strangers. He was internationally famous as a scientist before he became a figure in public affairs. Learned societies in his own and other countries honored him. His eminence as a mathematician is indicated by the statement that the Einstein theory was no mystery to him. A man of vision as well as of figures, he grasped the possibilities of aviation when the Wright brothers were exhibiting their first crude airplane. Such was the man who turned from his career as a teacher at the Sorbonne to engage in political activity, a change made in a mood of righteous indignation, for it was the persecution of Capt. Dreyfus which brought Painleve from his study to the hall of the Chamber of Deputies, and the beginning of his rise to the premiership.

Certain incidents in the life of this French statesman have especial appeal to Americans. As minister of war he welcomed Gen. Pershing to France. He was present at the tomb of Lafayette when an American officer utterd the phrase, "Lafayette, we are here." In recent years, he stood with Premier Herriot in maintaining that France should meet her payments to this country before asking a reconsideration of the agreement respecting the debts.

France will pay tribute to this departed leader with the honors she knows so well how to bestow. And there will be nobody to deny that he is entitled to his place among her illustrious sons.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

MRS. LINDBERGH AND THE COLONEL.

("'Once is enough. We're going home by boat,' said Mrs. Lindbergh."—News item.)

Col. Lindbergh—Well, dear, we'll stay here a few days and hop back to America.

Mrs. Lindbergh—No more hops, Charles, please.

Col. Lindbergh—But, my dear——

Mrs. Lindbergh—Now, Charles, a little hopping goes a long way. I've been very patient and I've hopped and hopped and hopped for the last three months till life has become just one hop after another. I've had enough.

Col. Lindbergh—I'm having the plane all gone over and we can fly back by——

Mrs. Lindbergh—It's no use, Charles. We're going back by boat.

Col. Lindbergh—It's a fine time of year to fly, Anne, and if we started . . .

Mrs. Lindbergh—Listen, dear, you just don't understand. I'm sick of airplanes. And another thing, Charles——

Col. Lindbergh—What?

Mrs. Lindbergh—That helmet and those flying clothes! Really!

Col. Lindbergh—What about them, dear?

Mrs. Lindbergh—I've had them on long enough. After all, Charles, they're all I've been wearing for months.

Col. Lindbergh—You didn't complain on the plane, dear.

Mrs. Lindbergh—Of course, I didn't. I said I'd fly to Europe with you, and I did. Believe me, I got awfully sick of it at times, but I didn't want to hurt your feelings.

Col. Lindbergh—I thought you were enjoying every minute of it, Anne.

Mrs. Lindbergh—Naturally. But, Charles, now that it's all over, may I tell you something?

Col. Lindbergh—Certainly.

Mrs. Lindbergh (resolutely)—There were times on those flights across the icy wastes and through the fogs when I could have screamed!

Col. Lindbergh—But the trip back by plane would be quicker, and if——

Mrs. Lindbergh—Please, Charles! After all, I'm a woman, not a sea gull.

Colonel—But if we——

Mrs. Lindbergh—No. I want a little comfort, a little room to move around, a little regularity now. I want to look in shop windows, listen to music and relax generally. Gosh, Charlie, but that airplane was uncomfortable! Imagine a woman traveling thousands of miles and never passing a shop window!

Colonel—I guess maybe you've got your mind set on going back by boat, Anne.

Mrs. Lindbergh (kissing him)—Yes. I knew you'd had enough flying, Charles!

CAMPAIGN PLEDGE.

I'll vote for almost any man
Who to the City Hall aspires—
If he will only tie a can
To oratory amplifiers.

I care not what his record be,
I'll toast his health in foaming beakers
And vote for him in highest glee—
If he'll campaign without loudspeakers.

In view of the rapid changes of the last six months Elmer Twitchell thinks Russia will have more difficulty recognizing Uncle Sam than Uncle Sam will have recognizing Russia.

What few people know is that George B. Luks, one of the country's great painters, who died this week, once drew the Yellow Kid cartoons in the old New York World.

The Government is to bar liquor advertising in dry States. It thinks it would be bad for them to know that prohibition had been repealed.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Emily Bronte.

The immediate and enormous success of Charlotte's novel, "Jane Eyre" (pronounced air) totally eclipsed the works of her sisters Emily and Anne. But while Anne is known today mainly because she was the sister of the other two, Emily is now recognized as the real genius of the family. Her strange novel, "Wuthering Heights," was the fruit of her bold daring and pictorial imagination. Its very abnormalities appeal to us today as they could not do when the book was published; for today there is an intense interest in every form of mental pathology. Stevenson was deeply affected by "Wuthering Heights" and called it "that powerful, miserable novel."

But Emily was even greater as a poet than as a novelist; though she was very angry when Charlotte found her poems in manuscript and proposed to publish them. With the greatest reluctance Emily finally consented to this, but only on the condition that the poems of all three sisters should be published together in one volume and under assumed names. Emily's poem beginning "Cold in the earth" is one of the most passionate and powerful love-poems in the English language, yet it was probably an expression of only an imagined lover. She took long walks on the lonely moors of Yorkshire, England, and confided in no one except her dog Keeper.

The three sisters lived with their father, who ate his meals in a separate room. Every evening the three girls walked around and around a table for hours, talking about their work. When Emily died the other two continued their walk; when Anne died, Charlotte walked alone, until her marriage a few years later. Then Charlotte died in less than a year.

The three Bronte sisters, Charlotte, Anne and Emily, all died young—Charlotte, 1816-1855; Emily, 1818-1848, and Anne, 1820-1849. Their father lived to be 84 and Charlotte's husband lived to be nearly 90.

Man Would Try to Move Mountains by Faith if He Really Believed He Could.

By Robert Quillen.

Approximately one-third of the people of the earth are Christians.

This means that one of each three persons should be free of all anxiety and unhappiness, despite poverty or hardship or the scorn of the world.

For the Christian—if, indeed, he is a Christian—believes that the Christ he worships is God of heaven and earth, with power over life and death, and is willing and able to care for him while he lives and give him blessed immortality when he dies.

He must believe these things if he is Christian, for he has the assurance of the Christ that they are true. He must believe them so profoundly that he "knows" they are true—as he knows daylight will follow darkness—as he knows two and two are four.

How, then, could he fear life or death?

If you knew beyond all doubting that Franklin D. Roosevelt and John D. Rockefeller loved you well enough to give their lives for you, and if these two had promised to care for you and grant any request that you might choose to make, would you not greet each morning with a smile of contentment or a joyous shout of laughter? Would not your faith in their power and generosity free you of all care and anxiety?

True, they could not take away the fear of death; but the Christian has no reason to fear it.

Suppose you have been crippled from birth and now have found a great surgeon, in whom you have absolute faith, who tells you that an operation will make you sound and whole as you never were before.

Would you enter the operating room with terror in your heart and fight against the ether? Or would you surrenger to sleep with a sense of security and peace, comforted with the hope of a glad awakening?

How can a Christian fear a sleep that promises so much?

There is no half-way ground for the Christian.

Jesus is the Son of God or He is not. His words are true or they are untrue.

If they are untrue, then Christianity is a cruel hoax and one-third of the earth's pepole are victims of a foolish superstition.

If they are true, the greatest folly in human history is to disbelieve and reject them; for if they are true, there is nothing in life that matters except to believe and serve Him and keep His commandments.

SCOTCH HERITAGE.

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

With the Crowd.

Like little girls and little boys,
How pleased we are with glittering toys!
We wander round and round about
And listen to the barkers shout.
We purchase at some gaudy stall
Delights that have no worth at all.
We ride in cars which nowhere go
Merely an instant's thrill to know;
Watch dancing girls who can not dance,
But merely wiggle, squirm and prance.

Still, dull indeed this life would be
If always wholly sane were we,
If added years removed us far
From what our little children are
And robbed us of the joy of play
And many a happy holiday.
Then men and women would become Severely cold and grave and glum,
Censorious of mind and tongue
And bitter comrades for the young.

So with the jostling crowd I run
To snatch my bit of foolish fun;
I linger where the crowd is thick;
To watch a shrewd magician's trick;
Buy trinkets which I do not need,
Instead of solemn books to read.
I ride on cars which nowhere go
But round and round, a thrill to know,
And thank the Lord, though growing gray,
I haven't lost the wish to play.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

WELL, the Washington correspondents are out to form another committee. They like to write about committees and laugh about them, but I know of no other set that likes more to have them. This one coming up is to deal fairly, efficiently and effectively with the leaks which it seems have been getting out of the President's biweekly press conferences. The explanation is that Mr. Roosevelt talks so frankly and confidentially with the gentlemen that something must be done to insure that there will be no violations of confidence.

Frankly, I think the whole thing is an effort to keep up the romance of the White House conferences, to perpetuate the impression that twice a week we go to see Mr. Roosevelt and he tells us "off-the-record" stuff which would rock the country if we were to let it get out. The result will be that the stock brokers will continue to annoy us and those vendors of "confidential" news letters will continue to have clients.

• • • •

I DON'T think that Mr. Roosevelt's worst critics will contend that he isn't smart. Yet, it would certainly not be very smart of him to get 100 newspapermen before him and tell them something which he did not want to get out. About 100 attend his conferences because they are quite enjoyable. Always, too, the girls who work about the place come in, and if any of the Roosevelt children are in town they come in with their visitors to see father do his stuff. And, believe me, it is well worth seeing. I have never seen a man better at quick answers, at handling himself under such conditions, as Mr. Roosevelt.

But if the correspondents ever come away with any information which he did not want them to have, or which he does not want them to publish, then he is not as smart as I have considered him.

Just think about the matter now. Does any one believe that the President or any one else will shout confidences to 100 or more men, some of whom, so crowded is the room, he can not see.

• • • •

THE rules governing the conferences do split the information into three categories. That of the first category we can attribute directly to the President; that of the second is given as "background," which we can use at our own discretion, but which we can not attribute to the President, and the third is the so-called off-the-record stuff, which we are not even supposed to tell our managing editors.

It is about this that there is so much bunk and about which the present squabble revolves. I have never believed a literal interpretation of the rule was wanted. Why the President of the United States would waste his time to tell 100 newspapermen something which he did not want them to breathe is something I can't understand.

And very frankly the more seasoned correspondents do not take this rule literally. What they do instead is to wait a few days and then the information they obtained "off-the-record" is reflected in what they write. Presumably, this is the purpose of the "off-the-record" stuff. That the President has just spoken to hear himself talk is difficult to believe.

In this way, the President is not embarrassed. The correspondent simply writes authoritatively on his own. He may split the information up over several days or as he comes to deal with the subjects which were discussed.

• • • •

IT is my understading that the squawk this time is not coming from the White House at all. It comes usually from sources that do not have the freedom of so-called interpretative writing, or of judgment when and not to write, and who want everybody to write the same story at the same time. They would have all the men in town lined up at a starting line and begin running with the pop of the gun.

In this particular instance, I have a suspicion that the complaint came from a fellow who intended to wait three days before getting out some information whereas his competitor only waited two.

Mr. Roosevelt has the right to bar any man from his conference that he wants to. Why not let him be the judge? Our business is highly enough organized as it is.

ACCURACY BEYOND BELIEF.

Take 333 human hairs, lay them snugly, one against the next, on a plane surface. The total width of the hairs is one inch, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Go the other way. Divide longitudinally one human hair into 1,200 equal parts. Each part is then 1-25,000,000 part of an inch in width.

This dimension seems so infinitesimally small that it would be beyond human comprehension.

CANADIAN BUFFALO SURPLUS.

Another reduction in the buffalo herd in Buffalo National Park at Wainwright, Alberta, has been found necessary in order to prevent its numbers from increasing beyond the capacity of the park to sustain the bison. The Government has, therefore, ordered the slaughter of from 1,000 to 2,000 selected animals, according to a Canadian bulletin. The meat will be sold by tender for the retail trade. The best heads will be sold to people who want them for wall decorations and the hides will be made into robes, coats and rugs.

America Urged To Recognize Soviet Union

U. S. Committee Declares Relations Necessary Between Nations.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Non-recognition of Russia, which has had a stable government for 16 years, is called a theoretical anomaly in report of the American foundation committee on Russian-American relations, published today.

Curtis Bok, chairman, said in a foreword, recognition of Russia, "in our judgment, is a question that should rest upon its own bottom; and the answer to it should be arrived at as a point of clarity in our international relations."

It delineates the recognition policies of America, saying:

"The policy the United States has followed more generally is the policy of recognizing de facto governments as soon as stability and order are maintained."

Does Not Sit as Judge.

By this policy, the report concluded, the United States would not concern itself with judgment on the "legitimacy" of the new government, its way of coming into existence, or its system of government.

The inquiry of the Russian-American committee was started several months ago. Its members are Thomas W. Lamont, Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard; J. H. Rand, jr., Esther Everett Lape, Col. Hugh L. Cooper, Paul D. Cravath, Walter C. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic; Walter W. Cook, of Johns Hopkins University; George H. Houston, president, Baldwin Locomotive Works; James D. Mooney, president, General Motors Export Co.; Thomas A. Morgan, president, Curtiss-Wright Corporation; David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; William Scarlett, Protestant Episcopal Bishop Coadjutor of Missouri; Jacob Viner, University of Chicago, and Allen Wardwell.

The report delves into questions of claims against the Soviet Union and the Russian counter claims, based on intervention.

Intervened With Allies.

"The United States," it said, "participated in the allied intervention in Russia.

"On the credit side—it should be noted that the United States prevented Japan from going into Russia alone, with a free hand; that it required pledges from Japan, and made it impossible for Japan to evade them entirely, and that the United States did withdraw from Russia with empty hands."

Huge Oil Tanks Periled in Fire

One Dead, 1 Hurt in Blaze Raging at Refinery in Michigan.

Mount Pleasant, Mich., Oct. 31 (AP).—Flames shooting up more than 200 feet tohight raged unchecked in the 15-acre enclosure surrounding more than 25 tanks of the Roosevelt Oil Co. refinery, which mysteriously burst into flame early today, burning a plant employe fatally and seriously injuring a plant watchman.

Claude Yaeger, 27, was burned to death shortly after the fire started, and Albert Ashley, refinery watchman, was burned severely on the hands and face.

The area houses storage tanks filled with thousands of barrels of gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate and crude oil, the largest containers having a capacity of 55,000 barrels. Firemen stood hopelessly by tonight, their apparatus useless as the wind shifted, ending hope that some of the tanks would be spared.

At brief intervals heavy detonations shook the city tonight as huge naphtha and gasoline tanks exploded. The burning refinery equipment is in a sparsely settled neighborhood, and no residences were believed endangered.

Overhearing a Clinical Report

A Solo Voice Speaks Out Upon A Democratic Thoroughfare

By William Harlan Hale.

That high-rate cab over there? Sure I'm on to that guy. Yeah, just another chiseler. But that's a small time racket, not like the others.

Well, now, take it from me. I see all kinds drivin' this hack around. I'd make your eyes pop with some of the stuff I hear 'em whispering when I drive 'em up to the Hill. Then they start talking about Roosevelt—"our dear President," oh yeah! Last night I had a couple of fares who must a' been big steel men. I tell you, I couldn't keep from turning around to watch 'em boil over.

Sure I'm on to it. Don't think anybody's fooling me. It's a racket. I tell you, its a racket.

What's a racket, you say? Well, I tell you, almost everything's a racket, come to think of it. Shucks, I shouldn't be crabbing about this here NRA, cause it got me more business than I ever had before in summer. And this feller Roosevelt, he looks pretty regular to me. Why, I even picked up his son over at the depot not so long ago.

Oh, I don't mean the old crowd was any better. It's all right with me when they kick old Hoover out on his ear, because he just never did know what it was all about. Remember those phoney statements he used to give out? He was a comic, I tell you.

But this here stuff, this NRA, if that's a miracle, I say it's a sour one. My old woman reads the paper and says to me, "Harry, I see by the paper where we's got to Buy Now." "Shucks," I tell her, "what with?" And the fight is on.

You get the point, you're a bright-looking feller, why this stuff has got to be the bunk. In this business we don't get any more than we did under Hoover, and here they go and shoot prices up on us and give us a lot of hooey about recovery and prosperity and everybody happy. "Well," I always say to Mike who runs the filling station, "Mike, I say, we're headed plumb for a revolution." Course Mike like the looks of that, bein' fighting wild Irish. He says, "O. K. I'll take this guy Wiggin," and he twists the gas hose all around itself, significant-like. Oh, Mike's a card.

Sure, I guess I see all kinds. I had a gang of fellers in here last week that looked like they was running a string of restaurants. Seems one of them used to pay his waitresses lousy little wages, but gave 'em good eats, and now under the law has got to lift his wages up to the minimum. But what does he do? He cuts out the eats. Let me tell you, I got red in the face taking that bird's money.

Didn't I tell you it was a racket? And now I hear them say back where you're sittin' that this here NRA is going on the rocks. Now, that may be the truth or a lot of hokum, but I wouldn't be surprised if it did go on the rocks it it has to work with a lot of the kind of boys I carry around.

Well, I had a relief in here a while ago, I don't know who it was, musta been some wild-eyed Senator from the sticks. He had the right idea, though. When he got done there wasn't an inch of skin left on the bankers and the politicians or anybody. I didn't get the names, but he laid 'em all out cold. I could just ride a guy like that around all day and not charge him a cent. It was like bein' in church and hearing the preacher rip hell out of the devil.

Yeah, I get the low-down on this town all right. I took a carload of big business men over to the Commerce Building, and just as they pay off I pick up a load of youngsters, secretaries maybe, but a bunch of Reds for sure. Well I couldn't say which of them two gangs did more swearing. If you ask me, I don't think none of those people is respectable folks like us.

Did I listen to that Red stuff? Sure, I know about revolution. I told you how I kid Mike about it. But you know, I had a guy in here a while ago who let me down. He told me they didn't use no taxicabs in Russia.

President's "Family" Prepares For "Chief" at Warm Springs

Patients 'Readying Up' Inn for Thanksgiving Dinner Guest.

Warm Springs, Ga., Oct. 31 (AP). About the wide verandas and in the spacious halls of the rambling old Meriwether Inn scores of eager patients today watched the start of preparations for Thanksgiving dinner with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, their "Chief."

The people of the Warm Springs Foundation, organized by the President for the treatment of after effects of infantile paralysis, in the President's own words, "have the will and the determination to get rid of small physical ailments, which, after all, do not amount to a hill of beans."

And not a small part of that will and determination is fostered by the President's annual Thanksgiving visit, so today they forgot physical handicaps and pitched into the work of making the inn bright for Mr. Roosevelt's arrival after he speaks at a celebration of Georgia's bicentennial at Savannah November 17.

Presides Over "Family."

According to a custom of years, President Roosevelt presides over the Thanksgiving dinner. The "members of the famliy," as he addresses them, gather in the spacious dining hall at the inn, which is appropriately decorated. There is a roaring wood fire in the massive stone fireplace, and there is turkey and other Thanksgiving extras.

Mr. Roosevelt usually talks about the progress, hopes and plans of the foundation. Sometimes he mentions that he regained his health here. No doubt this year he will mention "Georgia Hall," the new structure soon to replace Meriwether Inn.

Mixes Work and Rest.

The President's Thanksgiving here will be spent in his little white cottage on Pine Mountain, where he usually divides his time between conferences, correspondence and rest.

The last Thanksgiving party came shortly after Mr. Roosevelt was elected President. Arthur Carpenter, resident trustee of the foundation, echoed the view of the "family" when he said: "Some twenty million Americans have discovered what we have known for eight years."

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 31 (AP).—Walter Higgins, former convict, was sentenced to life imprisonment tonight by a jury which convicted him of participation in the abduction of Gus Buzzard, Sedalia, Mo., beer-truck driver.

Buzzard was seized near here July 21 and held for eight hours while robbers took 40 half-barrels of beer to Kansas City and sold it.

Reich Firebug's Double Amazes Berlin Court

Berlin, Oct. 31 (AP).—An amazed audience in the Reichstag arson trial beheld today the double of the young defendant Marinus Van Der Lubbe, in a 26-year-old student surnamed Perl. His unexpected appearance strengthened a defense contention that witnesses might have been mistaking him for Van Der Lubbe.

Perl's appearance furnished the second sensation today, the twenty-eighth day of hearings in which five Communists are accused of setting fire to the Reichstag.

Thief Accuses Torgler.

The other was the accusation by Gustav Lebermann, now serving a prison term for robbery, that Ernst Torgler sought his aid in firing the structure several times.

Perl's name was mentioned in the October 5 hearing when Torgler's attorney told the court an American attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays, said the student had a strong resemblance to Van Der Lubbe.

Perl testified he carried a package into the Reichstag on February 27, but maintained it contained only materials for the files.

Dimitroff Blames Nazis.

Georgi Dimitroff, one of three Bulgarian defendants, launched another of his attacks when Lebermann was produced as a witness.

Dimitroff, who is his own defense counsel, declared: "The circle of testimony against is now complete. It was started by Nazi Reichstag members, was continued by a Nazi journalist, and is now finished by a common thief!"

Murrell Case Is Set for Today

Army Lieutenant, Accused by Woman, Will Get Hearing in Texas.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 31 (AP).—Lieut. John H. Murrell, former all-American football star at West Point, will face examining trial before Paul Lockhart, United States commissioner, tomorrow on a charge of criminal attack.

The complaint, filed by Department of Justice agents on behalf of Miss Blanche Ralls, 31, alleges the attack occurred on the Government reservation at Fort Sam Houston here October 22 after Murrell had officiated as head linesman at the University of Texas-Centenary football game.

Defense attorneys announced they had abandoned plans to file a motion seeking continuance of the hearing. Murrell, a member of the Ninth Infantry, pleaded not guilty.

Held in jail without bond since his arrest last week, Murrell was given a special dinner today by grid officials who rallied to his support.

Miss Ralls came here recently from Birmingham, Ala. She is married and has a 12-year-old daughter.

EDGAR E. MOWRER, who will lecture on "Germany Turns the Clock Back," at the Jewish Community Center Sunday evening.

Mowrer to Lecture Here on Germany

Correspondent to Discuss Nazi Situation.

Edgar M. Mowrer, former newspaper correspondent in Berlin, will lecture on "Germany Turns the Clock Back," at the Jewish Community Center Sunday at 8:15 p. m. The Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Jewish Community Center jointly will present the lecturer.

Recently returned from Germany where he was correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, Mowrer attracted international attention when he vigorously protested the imprisonment of the aged Dr. Paul Goldman, editor of a newspaper in Vienna, because of his anti-Nazi writings.

Mowrer leaves soon to be correspondent at Tokyo, Japan. Arrangements for the appearance in Washington of Mr. Mowrer are in charge of the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy for Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and David Weiner for the Jewish Community Center.

Pasadena Smiles Again; Big Pet Snake Is Found

Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP).—Pasadena folks sighed with relief today for Elmer, 6-foot trained boa constrictor, was safe at home.

Elmer's owner, C. C. Stickney, took him for an automobile ride Sunday and lost him, thenceforth, the populace had one chill after another. Today a pedestrain saw the reptile dangling from a tree and Stickney went there, whistled, and Elmer slithered down.

Ignorance of New Russian System Could Blight Business Chances.

A trade advisory board, designed to coordinate and develop American trade with Russia in the wake of recognition, is taking shape in the minds of officials.

Sixteen years without official relations with the 165,000,000 citizens of the U. S. S. R. have resulted in a dearth of men familiar with business and social conditions in the Soviet Union.

Americans who possess a thorough business training and at the same time a first-hand knowledge of modern Russia can be counted on the fingers.

Many of those familiar with the U. S. S. R. are aware of how easily the trade prospects can be blighted through ignorance of the Soviet trade system. They frankly express belief that an advisory group will be needed.

The list of experienced business men who know Russia includes such names as:

Col. Hugh Cooper, builder of the Dnieper Dam; Charles E. Stuart, senior partner of Stuart, James & Cooke, mining consultants; H. H. Dewey, vice president of the International General Electric Company; George A. Bryant, vice president of the Austin Co. of Cleveland, and Reeve Schley, a vice president of the Chase Bank.

One reason a coordinating advisory board appears desirable is that all Soviet business is handled through a monopoly, the Commissariat of Foreign Trade and what may be considered its agent in the United States, the Amtorg of New York.

Gas Kills Mrs. Crozier, Steel Magnate's Wife

Merion, Pa., Oct. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Bettina Crozier, 35, socially prominent opera patroness and wife of the Crozier Steel Co. head, was found dead tonight in her garage.

$60,000 Gold Stolen On Busy London Street

London, Oct. 31 (AP).—Daylight robbers today seized three bars of gold worth about $60,000 from a delivery van on one of the city's busiest streets.

The bandits escaped in an automobile after a brief struggle with the youth in charge of the van.

The gold was en route to a London smelting company for refinement for jewelry uses.

Another at University Offers Resignation

Richmond, Oct. 31 (AP).—George Oscar Ferguson, jr., assistant dean of the college at the University of Virginia, is reported to have followed recent suggestions and submitted his resignation, effective if and whenever President John Lloyd Newcomb may wish.

Dean Ferguson's action was said to have been in line with the suggestion, after President Newcomb's recent appointment, that other officials show their loyalty by tendering resignations which might or might not be accepted to the new president could surround himself with aids who could best serve his policies.

28,000 Pieces Of Property Face Tax Sale

District Will Advertise Delinquent Parcels Next Month.

Approximately 28,000 pieces of property on which taxes due before July 1, last, have not been paid the District will be advertised for tax sale in January, William P. Richards, assessor, estimated yesterday.

About $1,250,000 in taxes is due on the properties with a total assessed value of about $90,000,000 Mr. Richards said.

Property on which taxes are delinquent will be advertised on December 6 and 13 for sale in January. Owners paying taxes and penalties prior to November 25 will avoid the advertising charge.

The number of delinquents this year is 3,000 greater than the number last year but the District probably will have to buy in about three-fourths of the total as was done last year.

The law provides for the sale of tax deeds which may be redeemed by the owner within two years on the payment of the amount of delinquent taxes, penalties, and advertising charge, plus 12 per cent per year on the total charges. When the District buys its own tax deeds interest runs at the rate of 6 per cent.

Tax deed buying by outsiders has fallen off recently because banks, which formerly loaned money on the deeds, are refusing to do so, Mr. Richards said.

Pieces of Eight — The Pirate Makes a Call — By Charles B. Driscoll

When Teach had made several visits to the home where Prudence Lutrelle lived with her mother near Bath, N. C., the girl confided to her mother that she was afraid, and did not like him. "Nonsense!" said the mother. "Is he not rich, and the Governor's friend?"

The widow would not believe that this gallant captain could be so gracious on land and a blood-thirsty demon at sea. Even as they talked, there were horsemen at the door. Two grand gentlemen, attended by pages, were dismounting outside the lowly cottage of Widow Lutrelle.

The door opened, and His Lordship, Gov. Eden, entered, closely followed by his friend, Capt. Edward Teach. It was notorious gossip in the colony that the Governor shared the pirate's loot. In return Eden protected Teach from capture by the King's armed forces.

Capt. Teach, with flattering phrases, proposed marriage to the lovely Prudence, all the time addressing her mother. The Governor put in an occasional word. The mother was flattered, but Prudence was cold with fear. How could she escape from this terrible dilemma?

131-Year-Old Jewelry Firm To Close Here

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Will Liquidate Firm of Galt & Bro.

Galt & Bro., jewelers, today begin a sale by which officials expect to close a business that has existed in the Capital area for 131 years.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the former President, "wants to liquidate her investment," William H. Wright, firm manager, said yesterday, explaining the action.

"For four years," Wright said, "the jewelry business has been in a steady decline. A business of this sort depends upon the moneyed classes. This class lives on income from investments. Investments no longer are paying dividends."

Possibility of sale of the firm, with or without stock on hand, is being considered, Mr. Wright said.

The store's entire stock is being offered for sale. Mr. Wright declined to place a value on it.

Mrs. Wilson has been sole owner of Galt & Bro. since the death in 1908 of her first husband, Norman Galt.

The business had been in the Galt family since 1802 when founded by James Galt. Galt first set up business in Alexandria. In 1825 he moved his store to the Capital. Two years later the following advertisement appeared in the U. S. Telegraph:

"James Galt respectively informs the citizens of Washington and the public in general that he carries on * * * on Pennsylvania avenue, between Ninth and Tenth streets where all business intrusted to his care will be thankfully received and carefully attended to by himself."

In 1847 James Galt died and the business was carried on by his sons, Mathew W. and William Galt, operating as M. W. Galt & Co. Norman Galt next headed the firm.

Under the name of Galt & Bro. the firm has been at its present location, 1107 Pennsylvania avenue, since 1868. It was remodeled in 1889.

Crowd Views Art of Negro

Paintings, Music, Books Included in Exhibit at Smithsonian.

More than 2,000 persons attended an exhibition of works of Negro artists and musicians yesterday in the National Gallery of Art, at the Smithsonian Institute, sponsored by the Association for Study of Negro Life and History. A special exposition of African art was made by Dr. Alain Leroy Locke, Negro Rhodes scholar, while the work of the Harmon Foundation was illustrated by motion pictures.

Striking, among the oil paintings, was a series of figures by James A. Porter, winner of many awards. Crayon and charcoal work of exceptional distinction by Edwin A. Harleston was exhibited.

The exhibit also showed books illustrative of the African's achievement in music.

Rare books, the background of the Negro in Africa and America, in a group known as the Moorland Foundation, were shown at Howard University in connection with the exhibit. The exhibit will be open during the week from 9 to 5, and will be viewed by school children Thursday afternoon.

Job Priority For Veterans Held Limited

Service Claim Superceded by Union Contract, Says Cummings.

Preference on public works jobs should be given trade union members with war service and dependents, over union members without war service, on public works projects where there is a union contract, under a ruling from the Attorney General, Secretary Ickes announced yesterday.

The public works chief had requested a ruling because of a National Recovery act clause which established "preference" for veterans on jobs financed with public works money.

In reply, the Attorney General held that "Congress did not intend that the nonunion former service man with dependents should have an absolute preference in the case where there is a union contract. 'Preference' should not be construed as an absolute preference," he said, adding:

"Indeed, the preference to former service men with dependents is to extend only to those qualified."

Where former service men are qualified, they are entitled to preference on union work if they are union members, the Attorney General held.

"A nonunion former service man with dependents would not be qualified for employment by a union contractor having a collective agreement which excludes nonunion men from employment," the opinion held.

Drunkenness Here Increases

Cheaper "High Moon" Is Blamed by Police for 70.4 Pct. Gain.

District arrests for intoxication in August were 35.9 per cent greater than those in August, 1932, according to police figures. September figures show an increase of 63.3 per cent above September 1932, and 70.4 per cent over September, 1931.

Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt, before whom most of the intoxication cases are tried, attributes the increase to "high moon," an alcoholic concoction which sells for five and ten cents a glass. It is alcohol made one night and sold the next morning, Judge Schuldt said.

The drink is made to sell to the poorer classes and with the imminence of repeal the price has been further lowered, Judge Schuldt said.

Sorority Plans Dinner.

The Zeta chapter of the Sigma Kappa Sorority, of George Washington University, will hold a dinner tomorrow night at Tilden Gardens in observance of the annual roll call and founders' day. Mrs. Ted Allen is in charge.

View of The Washington Post Free Cooking School During Yesterday's Session

Sponsored by The Washington Post to bring the most advanced cooking knowledge to the women of Washington and surrounding territories, the first session of The Post free cooking school was received with tremendous enthusiasm by an impressive gathering. The school is under the direction of Miss Ruth Chambers, specialist in home economics of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Paul Goeser, who is also connected with this representative body of the country's food industry, was introduced by Miss Chambers and gave an interesting demonstration of new meat-cuts and how they should be prepared. Mr. W. C. Davis, senior marketing specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, presented Miss Chambers to her audience. The school will be in session again today and tomorrow beginning at 2 p. m., and on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. An interesting feature of each demonstration is the unique parade of foods and the distribution of more than 40 daily prizes. These gifts include a variety of articles from electric refrigerators and an electric range to large market baskets filled with appetizing food products.

Labor Protests Costs 2 Firms Blue Eagles

(Associated Press.)

This punishment was dealt as NRA announced Henry Ford would comply with one requirement of the automobile code; and while Hugh S. Johnson was planning an airplane tour of the West.

Approval by the President was announced of seven more codes, covering the dress industry, motor buses, road making machinery, fertilizer, millinery trimming, gas cocks, and packaging machinery.

The firms stripped of the eagle were a manufacturing company and a laundry. The compliance boards of the two cities recommended the action.

The charges were: That the laundry had not adjusted complaints of employes that it was "staggering" the hours of workers to evade the maximum hour provisions, and that the manufacturer violated both maximum hours and minimum wage provisions.

Johnson's tour will start Saturday if possible. His first speech will be in Chicago. Much of the trip is to be in farm territory.

Code Violations Denied.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 31 (U.P.). Sol Opotowsky, president of the Moro Manufacturing Co. here, protested tonight against a telegram received today from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, demanding that the company surrender its NRA insignia.

Opotowsky denied any violations of the code under which he was operating. He sent a telegram to Gen. Johnson, asking for a further hearing and requesting permission to retain the Blue Eagle pending rehearing.

NRA Violation Denied.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A statement declaring charges against the company to be without foundation was issued tonight by Frances Hare, attorney for the Sunshine Laundry and Dry Cleaning Co., ordered today by the NRA to surrender its Blue Eagle.

Self-Inflicted Shot Fatal.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 31 (Spl.). Robert B. Dinsmore, 56, died today at the Loudoun County Hospital from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. He was a farm worker.

Dickinson Brands NRA Unworkable

Plays NRA Aims.

Dickinson opened with a bitter attack upon the intent itself of the President's recovery program.

"Last November the people voted for a change," he said in even, unemotional tones. Then his voice rose. "No one dreamed," he fairly shouted, "that the fundamentals of our Government were to be destroyed."

Dickinson said the President had broken his promises regarding the NRA and was making the program permanent. He said the President had "reversed himself" and that the basic policy at Washington seemed to be to give all authority, all power, all control to the Government.

He compared NRA to a "beast" by quoting the Biblical verses. He said NRA had lowered wages and helped only the "big fellows," warned that it would mean "elimination and destruction of every independent oil concern in existence," and shouted that "slowly all rural business is being crushed beneath the wheels of a Juggernaut (a false god) conceived during the stresses of war and now forcing itself upon us."

West Praises President.

The Iowa Senator charged that the only thread running through all Administration action was a trend toward more socialistic government control of everything.

He defended increased government control as necessary. He said NRA was constructed to meet the crisis of the depression and had met it after three "do-nothing" years in which the Government refused even to acknowledge the character of the emergency.

Police Bribery Charge Given To Grand Jury

The case of two policemen charged with extortion was referred to the grand jury yesterday when Police Court Judge McMahon granted a continuance of the preliminary hearing until November 7 at the request of Assistant United States Attorney Michael Keogh.

If an indictment is returned no further action will be taken in Police Court, Keogh said. Should an indictment be voted it would be returned today in District Supreme Court.

The officers under arrest are Harry G. Bauer, 39, of 4201 Fourth street northwest, and Rudolph Schleichert, 30, of 1733 Bay street southeast, both members of the liquor squad.

They are accused of accepting a $50 bribe from Alfred H. Dudley, 28, of 1832 Calvert street northwest, whom they arrested on a liquor charge.

Dr. Ryan Talks to Club On Nation's Industries

Snake Dance

U. S. Tolerance Pledged for Indian Religions.

Moencopi Village, Ariz., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A broader policy of tolerance for picturesque religious dances of the Southwestern Indian was expounded here today by John Collier, United States Indian Commissioner.

Commissioner Collier said the Government has neither the right nor the desire to interfere with any religion.

Inquest Is Ordered In Newsboy's Death

Parents Cling to Theory Francis Long Was Slain.

A belated inquest will be held today in the death of Francis Long, 13-year-old Washington Post carrier, whose body was recovered from the Washington Channel October 15 after the boy had been missing five days.

An autopsy at the time disclosed the boy had drowned and revealed no marks of violence. The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Long, have held to the belief that Francis was attacked and probably slain before being thrown in the channel.

Several conflicting reports regarding the boy's actions prior to his disappearance have come to police since his body was found.

Lindbergh Suspect Gets Term in Jail

Girl Also Is Sentenced in Statutory Case.

Boston, Oct. 31 (U.P.).—John Gorch, 37, most recent suspect in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, today was sentenced to six months in jail on a statutory charge involving him with Miss Evelyn Klimasewiska, 23, of Springfield, Vt.

Miss Klimasewiska received a similar sentence and both appealed. She was held in $10,500 bail and Gorch's $50,500 bail was reduced to $45,000.

Municipal Judge Charles L. Carr continued until November 8 the case against Gorch based on fugitive warrants from Philadelphia, Jersey City and Newark, N. J. The warrants charge larcenies and authorities also hold a warrant against Gorch as a parole violator from Sing Sing.

Gorch was found not guilty on a charge of defrauding a Boston woman of $3,500.

Possibility of the Government's return to operation of ships was suggested yesterday as a result of the Senate's investigation into ship and plane subsidies, by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee.

Two other possibilities that Black foresaw were retention of subsidies in the form of ocean and air mail contracts, but with stricter Governmental supervision, and abandonment of the subsidy system entirely, leaving the American merchant marine and air lines to private business to operate as best it could without Government aid.

"If it is determined that subsidies are to be retained, it will be essential that stricter watch be kept on the amount of Government money invested in ship and air lines, and also how it is spent," said Black.

"There must be no exorbitant salaries or expense accounts paid from the Government's funds."

The committee, which will meet again Tuesday, November 7, has been sitting for a month. Its investigation of three shipping companies, said Black, already has brought to light enough material to suggest one of the three possibilities mentioned.

says: "ONE of the things I simply cannot understand is why any woman will continue using old fashioned soaps—when there is a soap like Rinso. That is why I never miss an opportunity to demonstrate Rinso in my home-making classes. I let women see, with their own eyes, how Rinso's lively suds soak out dirt — saving all the hard work of scrubbing — saving the wear and tear on clothes. I let them see how white things come 4 or 5 shades whiter—how colors come bright and fresh as new—from a Rinso soaking. I impress them with the fact that Rinso saves their health and strength — saves their hands, too. I urge them to use no soap but Rinso for the wash, for dishes, for all cleaning."

Come and see clothes washed 4 or 5 shades whiter—the "scrubless" Rinso way. You'll want to use Rinso for all cleaning—when you see its lively suds. Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. Marvelous in washers, too; makers of 40 famous washers recommend it.

Today's Message from

Ruth Chambers

Dear Madam:

What an interested, almost excited, audience heard my talks and demonstrations yesterday in which I used Comet White Rice and Comet Brown Rice in various recipes! Many experienced home cooks were amazed at the many delicious main dishes, desserts and cereals Comet Rice would create and expressed the conviction that Comet Rice was definitely on their everyday list.

Of course it was Comet's nutritious values and delicious "sealed in" goodness that won them. Comet Rice is the better rice—it has the quality, the so important uniformity not found in other rice and absolute cleanliness—all assured by the exclusive Hotpan Process only Comet can use.

But the Comet Rice Ball was a sensation! On every side I was asked where one might be obtained! Of course, I told them (and I am repeating here to you) how to do it. Send a coupon that most grocers have, or a top of a Comet Rice Package and 30 cents to the Comet Rice Company, 190 Franklin Street, New York City, and they will send you a Comet Rice Ball postpaid. This is a real bargain for the Rice Ball sells up to 50c in the regular stores. Send now and have it ready to make the new dishes I am going to tell you about on your visit to the school.

Sincerely,
RUTH CHAMBERS.

All Washington grocers have Comet Rice—get your package today and use the coupon or top of package for special price on a Comet Rice Ball.

3 Overcome Battling Fire In Chevy Chase

Norcross Home Damaged $10,000 in Blaze Laid to Short Circuit.

A $10,000 fire in which three firemen were overcome by smoke last night added to the noise and confusion of the Chevy Chase, Md., Halloween celebration.

The home of Theodore W. Norcross, 407 Raymond street, was almost destroyed by a blaze originating from a short circuit. The second floor and attic were burned, and the first floor was badly damaged by water and smoke.

Three firemen, Deputy Chief Charles J. Sackett and Private James H. Garrett, of the Chevy Chase Fire Department, and H. H. Musgrave, of the Bethesda company, were overcome by smoke, but were revived.

Norcross, assistant forester in the engineering branch of the United States Forest Service, said he could not estimate the damage without a checkup. Firemen said it would amount to nearly $10,000.

Firemen from Chevy Chase, Bethesda and Washington battled the flames 30 minutes.

NRA Chiefs Show First Hint of Fear

many persons who accepted on faith everything sponsored by President Roosevelt now have become incredulous. It is conceded on all sides that once President Roosevelt loses the almost solid popular support he has enjoyed, his troubles will begin.

Republicans Get Busy.

The Republicans have seized the present situation as their opportunity to make the first official attack on the Roosevelt program, as exclusively reported yesterday in The Washington Post. Even the political writers were surprised by the reappearance of Republican propaganda. With that party demoralized by last year's election and its leaders silent and uncertain of themselves in view of the overwhelming Roosevelt popularity, Republican headquarters had become one of the forgotten places around the city.

The author of the handbook sent by the Republican national committee to its members and State chairmen remained somewhat of a mystery. But the belief persisted that it was the work of John Callan O'Laughlin, the new executive assistant to Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican committee. Mr. O'Laughlin's friends believed his ingenuity was equal to borrowing Al Smith's favorite line "Let's Look at The Record" as the title for the handbook.

Mr. O'Laughlin declined to comment yesterday, beyond explaining that Mr. Sanders was the chairman of the committee and responsible for all its works. But among political observers the opinion was general that the handbook was not the work of Mr. Sanders.

O'Laughlin Just Smiles.

When asked whether he proposed to become the "Republican Charley Michelson," Mr. O'Laughlin refused to do more than smile. Charles Michelson, director of publicity for the Democratic National Committee from 1928 to 1932, during that period kept a running fire centered on former President Herbert Hoover and the Republican party. Every time they gave him an opening he drove through. Mr. Michelson in those years seemed to worry the Republican leaders more than any five Democratic senators did.

Political Washington, as a result of the first attack, was wondering yesterday whether the Republicans had taken a leaf from the Democratic copybook. Quietly and without any fanfare of trumpets the Republican headquarters was reorganized several months ago with Mr. O'Laughlin in charge. A research staff was put to work, collecting everything said by or about the Roosevelt administration.

Mr. O'Laughlin apparently thinks the time to start using this ammunition has arrived. It is understood that he plans to put large quantities of it in the hands of the Senate and House Republicans when they return for the January session of Congress.

Elections Next Year.

With the Congressional elections next year as the goal, politics in all probability will play its normal part in that session, unlike the special spring session.

In Mr. O'Laughlin the Republicans have an experienced journalist as well as a man trained in the political arena by Theodore Roosevelt. He spent years roving the world as a foreign correspondent for American newspapers and in writing Washington correspondence. He served for a short period as First Assistant Secretary of State at the end of the Theodore Roosevelt regime. He is now the publisher and editor of the Army and Navy Journal.

Meanwhile, the Democratic National committee headquarters has been dismantled to the status of a patronage registration bureau. Mr. Michelson, however, has been shifted to supervise NRA publicity, where it is possible for him to be just as effective as before, but in a defensive way. He chose to ignore yesterday the Republican attack.

Kidnapers Rob Victim's Safe

Two Men and Woman Slug Millionaire, Force Him to Open Office.

Marshall, Mich., Oct. 31 (AP).—Two men and a woman, described as "hard characters," to day kidnaped Louis E. Brooks, millionaire manufacturer and social leader, beat him, forced him to open a safe in his office, and then released him after obtaining $35 in cash and between $10,000 and $15,000 in bonds and securities.

The estimate of the loot came from Brooks' attorney, James W. Mackey, several hours after the manufacturer, beaten and bruised, had been found at his farm home near here. Details were given by Prosecutor William J. Kearney who talked with Mackey.

Kearney said he had asked the Department of Justice to investigate the case.

After binding a watchman and looting the safe, the men drove Brooks in his automobile, to a point two miles south of Battle Creek, hid the car keys under a culvert and fled.

Brooks recovered the keys and drove to his farm where he called for medical aid.

Atlanta, Oct. 31 (AP).—Gov. Talmadge today ordered a company of National Guardsmen to accompany Mack Jones, Negro, held in jail here, to Homer tomorrow and protect him during his trial for alleged attack and murder of a white woman.

Ickes Denies Holding Back Power Funds

Municipalities Urged to Hasten Activities and Push Work, He Says.

Replying to reported criticism aimed at delays in alloting public works funds to municipal power projects, Secretary Ickes, Administrator of Public Works, yesterday declared these proposals are on a preferred status

The case of an application from the city of Culpeper, Va., for funds to aid in constructing a municipal light plant, was explained by Mr. Ickes' engineers.

They said bids were advertised and the lowest, which Culpeper authorities desired to accept, did not conform in all respects to specifications. A change of design is being considered. When an agreement can be reached between the bidder and Culpeper officials on the changes, it was stated, funds will be advanced by the Public Works Administration.

Mr. Ickes said several allotments have been made for municipal electric light plants, including one in San Francisco.

Mr. Ickes said he asked all State public works boards to send in their big projects first. He explained that it takes no longer for the P. W. A. to examine and put through a large project than a small one, and that many more men can be employed.

Fight to Open On Soil Erosion

H. H. Bennett Heads New Bureau; $5,000,000 Allotted.

Following out wishes of President Roosevelt in furthering a campaign against soil erosion, Secretary Ickes yesterday announced the organization of a bureau to be known as the Soil Erosion Service, which was $5,000,000 from public works funds.

Ickes appointed H. H. Bennett, director of the new bureau, and W. C. Lowdermilk, vice director. Their work will be to carry out a number of strategically located areas as a coordinated demonstrational program which will employ all practical control measures in accordance with the adaptability of the land.

Both mechanical and vegetative methods will be employed.

It was suggested that organizations desiring funds for soil erosion control work should obtain the assistance of the Soil Erosion Service in preparing applications. This course was suggested to insure that projects will meet the approval of the service.

Tragedy Suspected As Youth Vanishes

Police Search Woods for Boy in Ill Health.

Members of the Rockville Rescue Squad and Montgomery County Police were searching wooded sections near Rockville last night for Samuel Briggs, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Briggs. The boy disappeared from his home early yesterday.

Young Briggs, employed at a farm outside Rockville, has not been seen since leaving for work. He was dressed in working clothes and carried no money. Relatives fear foul play or suicide. The boy has recently been in ill health, his parents said.

Austria Looks Into Nazi Trend of Opera Stars

Vienna, Oct. 31 (AP).—The ministry of education is investigating alleged Nazi agitation among the Wagnerian heroes and heroines of the Vienna state opera, some of whom reputedly have gone completely Hitler.

The opera singers, being federal employes, are subject to the same rules as the other civil service employes, who recently were required to swear allegiance to an independent Austria.

Bandit Robs Cafe of $600

O'Donnell Sea Food Grill Victimized in Early Morning.

A lone, unmasked robber held up the night manager and two employes in O'Donnell's Sea Food Grill, 1207 E street northwest, early yesterday, rifled the cash register and strong box, and escaped on foot with $600.

James H. Scott, night manager, and two colored waiters were preparing to go off duty about 6 a. m., when the robber entered. He pointed a pistol at Scott and ordered the colored men to stand against the wall.

Snatching the keys to the strong box he emptied the cash register of bills and then opened the money container. Jamming the loot into his pockets, he ran.

Police were told the robber had been observed loitering around the restaurant, staring idly in the windows, several hours before the holdup. He was unshaven, of medium stature and poorly dressed, police were told.

Arrest of 2 Boys Stirs Falls Church

Citizens Gather at Hall, But Cause No Trouble.

Threatening groups of Falls Church, Va., residents last night gathered about the police station after police arrested two 12-year old boys for Halloween pranks, but early this morning no trouble was reported. The boys were sent home.

Three boys were taken by police from a crowded automobile, running without lights, and held a short time.

Two plain clothesmen guarded the home of Mayor L. P. Daniels all evening, and the mayor, whose ouster is demanded in petitions, remained in seclusion. Falls Church residents resent arrest of several citizens on trivial charges.

$13,000 Grant Will Aid Sherman Square Work

The Public Works Administration yesterday allotted $13,000 to the Office of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations for seeding, planting and construction of new walks in Sherman Square, in the rear of the Treasury.

A second allotment of $17,175 to the National Parks Service is for repairs to the Aztec National Monument in New Mexico.

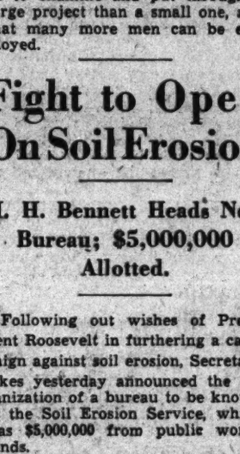
"I am Introducing



A NEW TASTE SENSATION to Washington" —Says Ruth Chambers

A BLENDED SYRUP WITH AN AMAZING FLAVOR, SUCH AS YOU HAVE NEVER TASTED BEFORE

ONE of the most remarkable things that Ruth Chambers is introducing, during the course of this food show, is a blended syrup—a flavor new to Washington and altogether delightful.

This is King Syrup—a delicious food well worth knowing about both because of its unusual food value and its remarkable adaptability to many different uses: Pour it over waffles or pancakes, mix it with milk as a beverage, use it in making cake and gingerbread . . . watch Ruth Chambers demonstrate it—then try it—and you will never be without it!

SEE THE Gas REFRIGERATOR BEFORE YOU BUY

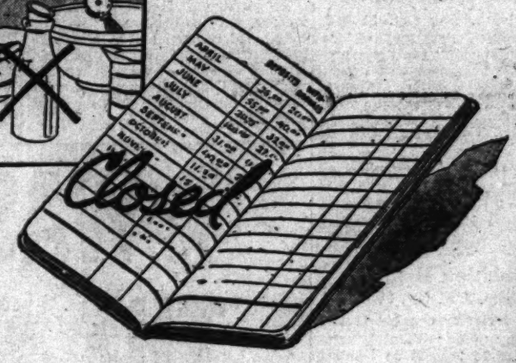
GOING WITHOUT REFRIGERATION IN WINTER IS LIKE GIVING UP YOUR SAVINGS ACCOUNT FOR THE SEASON



NRA WE DO OUR PART

You serve more hot meals in winter than in summer. This usually requires the storage of a greater amount of perishable foods, available for use when you want them. Leftovers increase in amount. The actual necessity for proper food preservation is probably greater in winter than in summer.

That's why we urge you to see the gas refrigerator—that's why we urge you to buy it—to enjoy the savings that proper food care can mean at all times of the year.

It has been estimated that 20% of foods purchased, unless properly preserved, is an actual loss in the average home. This loss alone, put into dollars and cents, would buy a gas refrigerator—aside from the many other savings it makes possible.

See the gas refrigerator—then let your own judgment decide!

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Carrots for Cold.

There is some promise that the humble carrot may supply a preventive of common colds and of sinus infections as well. In fact, it may protect against sore throats, pharyngitis and laryngitis. What is more, it may be a cure as well as a preventive.

For several years it has seemed that some one or more of the vitamins helped to protect us against winter-spring infections. Since vitamin D seemed to meet the bill of requirements for a general winter-spring invigorator, we were disposed to think it protected against the common cold and its relatives. Taking cod liver oil for a month or so after the first of the year became almost a vogue in spite of the taste, so disagreeable to some. The results did not quite come up to expectations. In fact, there was a group of investigators who contended that vitamin D, and the cod liver oil and other medicines that contained it, had no power to ward off colds.

Then came some proof that vitamin A is more potent than D in prodding the body to protect itself. This vitamin is soluble in oils. It abounds in carrots and in various other vegetables. Those vegetable oils that are pigmented, such as the yellow oil of carrots, yellow corn oil, and various other pigmented vegetable products, some of which are not yellow, seem to be the natural source of this vitamin. A substance out of the vitamin is named carotin, because it is found in abundance in that vegetable. So much is known about vitamin A, carotin and other substances from which it can be built, or which can be derived from it, that we may yet be able to produce the vitamin in the laboratory and release for other purposes the soil now used for growing carrots.

Buerger's Disease.

M. R. writes: 1, What is Buerger's disease?

2. What causes it?

3. Is it curable?

4. What will cure or relieve?

Reply.

1. Buerger's disease is an affection of the leg which develops on exertion in elderly people. There are cramps and the feet become cold, white and apparently bloodless. It differs from night cramps in that it comes on as the result of walking; from Raynaud's disease, in that it is caused by exertion and not by cold, and cramping is a prominent symptom.

2. The ultimate cause nobody knows. Among the contributing causes are age, exertion and a lack of balance in the muscles and nerves of the leg artery walls. The people of some races are more prone to it than are those of other races.

3. In only a limited sense.

4. Protecting the leg muscles against hard work and exposure, rest, refraining from the use of tobacco, alternate hot and cold foot baths, alternate raising and lowering of the feet. Operation has a place.

Nerves.

Mrs. B. B. writes:

1. Are carbonated beverages known to have any marked effect on the kidneys?

2. What is the value of massage, chiropractic treatment, &c., for nerves?

3. What beverages are suitable for nervous persons?

Reply.

1. No more than other liquids.

2. "Nerves" is a quality of mind. As a rule, it means a deficiency of poise and balance. The value of the treatments you ask about is in proportion to the effect on the mind. If they help a person to develop mental control they do some good.

3. The beverages that contain no alcohol and no caffein rank with plain water in their relation to nervousness. If, however, a man convinces himself that a given beverage quiets his nerves, it does—or something that comes to the same thing.

Pupils Attacked Going to School

Hunt Pushed for Man by Maryland Police; Boy Bound to Tree.

Carson Harker, 10, was found Monday bound to a tree in a woods near the school. The boy's sister, Katherine, 12, attracted by his screams, found him wired by the wrists, police were told.

Carson said he had been attacked on his way to school, dragged to the woods and told he would be killed if he made a noise. He said he had been trussed up for more than an hour.

Shortly before, Anna Williams, 12, Suitland, was reported to have narrowly eluded a man answering the same description. Friends said she outran him when he jumped from a taxicab and attempted to grab her.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (Adv.)

Gentlemen;

I have just come back from a trip thru your Housefurnishings and China Sections, and I want to tell you how much impressed I was with the unusual variety and completeness of assortments in that Section.

I was especially impressed with the number of new things that make cooking and home management not only easier but truly interesting. That collection of "Gadgets" particularly intrigued me — I could use every one of them.

During the Washington Post Cooking School, I am going to use a number of your articles and kitchen appliances every day. I only wish every woman in this city could see your splendid new items about which I am most enthusiastic and which I will use in my daily Cooking Demonstrations.

Yours very truly,
Ruth Chambers

Mr. Ahmet Muhtar Host at Reception

Diplomats and Smart Society Greet Ambassador of Turkey at Event Celebrating Founding of Republic.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Congratulations were the order of the evening when members of the Diplomatic Corps, officials, and smart resident society greeted the dean of the corps, the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, last evening at the brilliant reception in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Turkish Republic.

The Embassy on Twenty-third street, overlooking Rock Creek Park, was ablaze with lights as hundreds of motors drove into the drive to deposit ladies and gentlemen, all of whom wore appropriate decorations.

In the large reception hall at the head of the grand staircase, the distinguished Ambassador welcomed his guests. The walls of the room, panelled in grained oak more than 150 years old, which had been brought from England, reflected the light of the fire and the soft colors of the gowns.

The ballroom, banked with palms and great standards of white and yellow chrysanthemums, was the gathering place of the younger guests.

The retiring Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Debuchi were the center of a group of friends who expressed their regrets to the popular envoy for his departure.

British Ambassador Lindsay and Lady Lindshay were the center of various groups, who welcomed the latter to Washington after her brief sojourn in New York. Lady Lindsay wore a gown of dark brown lace fashioned on simple lines, and carried a large fan of pale mauve ostrich. The Ambassador of Peru; Senor Don Manual Freyre y Santander, chatted with the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva. The latter wore a gown of black velvet which complemented her auburn hair. The Ambasador of Argentina and Senora de Espil held court in the large drawing room of the embassy, where the priceless Aubusson tapestries made a fitting background for the beauty of Senora de Espil.

The Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowski were accompanied by members of the staff, including the Secretary of the Embassy and Mme. Moscicka. Mme. Sokolowska wore a Grecian frock of heavy white crepe, while Mme. Moscicka was gowned in deep red velvet. The Minister of Switzerland was accompanied by Mme. Peter, who wore formal black satin, and nearby were the Minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulous.

Mme. Prochnik, with her husband, the Minister of Austria, was gowned in white crepe, fashioned with a brief jacket trimmed with sable. The Minister of Austria and Mme. Mrs. Woodring was charming in a gown of dusky pink trimmed with a cluster of flowers of the same shade; Miss Florence Harris was in cloth of gold, and Miss Dorothea Lane in white, Miss Elsie Ekengren in blue satin trimmed with velvet of the same shade, and Miss Laura Tuckerman in mauve satin.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull were among the early arrivals. Mrs. Hull wore a gown of shell pink satin trimmed with sable. The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, also were present, Mrs. Carr wearing a gown of pastel blue satin.

New Lotions Make Curls Dry Quickly

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Finger waves would be pleasant experiences if it didn't take so long to dry them. Some statistician should figure out the number of hours women spend under hair dryers. He'd have an imposing group of numerals, without a doubt.

Beauty shops all over the country are trying to lessen the time required to dry waves. At least one shop in Washington has been successful in this direction. The timesaver is a new finger wave lotion that, by some magic, dries in just about half the time that other lotions do. Another virtue: It leaves the hair soft and shining, without flakes.

This same shop prides itself upon its hair cuts, given by men barbers. Ever notice that the greatest chefs and barbers are men? Women never quite reach the pinnacle in either profession, we're told. The barbers at this particular shop give personality hair cuts. That is, they snip the customer's locks in the style that best suits her individuality.

The shampoos are nice, too. A vinegar rinse is given without extra charge. A soapless oil shampoo is recommended for those bothered with falling or dry hair.

Here are some of the prices at this downtown shop: Hair cut, 75 cents; shampoo and finger wave with the new lotion, $1.10; facials, from $1 to $3.

Lost handkerchiefs stand a better chance of being returned to their rightful owner if her given name is worked in them. The Puerto Ricans do the names in such exquisite drawnwork that one must look twice to realize that the delicate threads really do spell something.

These imported handkerchiefs may be had in white, red, yellow, green, orange, dark blue or light blue. The linen is extraordinarily fine in the white ones. All have hand-rolled hems. The white ones are 10 inches square while the colored ones are 12 inches.

An F street department store has them with widely used names, as Jane, Mary, Margaret and Elizabeth, already worked into them. Those who have unusual names may order their handkerchiefs and receive them from Puerto Rico in three weeks.

Rhodium plate, in baguette cut, makes glittering bracelets. Six narrow circlets are fastened together with a round onyx ornament. This bit of onyx is just the right size to hold the initial of the bracelet's owner. Those who buy a bracelet may have the initial put on without charge at a downtown department store. Remember that two bracelets are much smarter than one this year. Wear one of the gay, clinking things on each arm.

Price, 59 cents.

A powder brush is ever so much nicer than a powder puff, when make-up is being applied at the home dressing table. Powder puffs have their uses, of course. Nothing quite takes their place in the purse or compact. But when one is doing one's face "from scratch," the powder brush is the thing. It gives a perfect blend and its touch is so feathery that no powder is pushed into the pores.

A good-looking one has a squarish black back and amusing little handle. The brush itself is pure camel's hair and may be washed and washed and washed.

The price is $1.00.

Glistening moire card table covers, in green, black, brown, red or blue, have elastic strips at the corners so that they fit the tables without a wrinkle. The moire material is so heavy that it has a leathery texture. It is sufficiently rough to keep the cards in their places when they have been placed on the shiny surface.

Price, 38 cents.

A long, narrow bag has two large pockets, a passport pocket, change purse and two metal oblongs in the lower left corner for initials. Fabricoid, smooth or rough grained, is the material. The colors are black, gray, brown or navy.

The bag is ten inches long and five inches wide, an ideal size for tucking beneath one's arm. There is a neat back strap, however, for those who prefer a firmer hold on their purses.

After These Things.

By Katherine W. Smith.

When I have danced too often on the hill,
Or laid too lyric flowers on your hair,
Or felt too stinging sprays of water blind
My eyes with sudden pain—or tossed a prayer.

When dryads group too closely in a grove
Of ancient wondering trees, if I should cry
With ecstacy too loudly, I would know

Wools Adopt Fancy Weaves, Bright Colors

(Associated Press.)

In tweeds with tang and zip, woolens of imaginative weave, Betty Coed and the rest of the feminine cohorts will go to the football games.

All outdoor occasions will be warmed by these woolens, quite the niftiest of their kind to appear in many a year.

To Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's athletic type and outdoor habits, they fit as though designed especially for that purpose. She has been wearing a tweed suit of rough-and-ready weave in black and gray threads. And there's almost a coed youthfulness in a new brown sports woolen of striped weave. It has a dashing, figured, darker brown scarf done in a butterfly tie at the throat.

A skirt and scarf of scarlet plaid and a blouse of gray rabbit hair were combined in one of the smartest college girl costumes to hit the Capital shops. The plaid scarf was appliqued to the gray blouse in a V in front, and left with flying ends to tie in back. The scarlet belt buckle was in the back too.

A Rodier fancy woolen weave in Yale blue had a blue suede scarf tie, and a gray with red splashes woven in a dot-and-dash design had a red suede scarf. The store stylist confided that there must always be some Yale blue dresses in stock in the fall for the girls who are invited to the Yale game. A woolen, in which red, yellow, black and white yarns were dashingly woven, had a flaring red scarf, matching the red revealed by a gap between drop-shoulder and sleeve.

A brilliant green tweed suit had a high beaver collar in brown, with green buttons punctuating the beaver fur. A rust-colored, three-piece tweed had rust-colored buttons similarly decorating the brown galyac fur that formed the front and pockets of the tailored suit beneath the top coat.

Where all the other tweed coats had fur collars and cloth cuffs, one individualistic and very smart model in green check had a big cloth scarf collar to bundle up the throat, and big cuffs of beaver.

Many a light or bright-colored tweed coat had a dark lining matching the fur in which it is trimmed.

Lieut. Col. Marquina Arrived in City

Lieut. Col. Ricardo Guzman Marquina, newly appointed military attache to the Peruvian Embassy, has arrived in Washington to assume his duties. Col. Guzman Marquina has been military attache for short periods to several European countries. He is an aviation officer.

Col. Marquina was accompanied by Dr. Juan E. Mendoza, first secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, and Col. Burnett, foreign liaison officer, when calling on the chief of staff yesterday morning.

Woman Who Ran Jitney Ford Now Mistress of Large Mansion

A little more than a decade ago Mrs. Robert L. May was driving a Ford truck that had been made over into an improvised bus. Today she and her husband have a hundred buses that ply Washington traffic lanes. And she is mistress of a beautiful Virginia mansion.

Washington's "Bus Driver Number One" Is Gentle Married Lady.

A stately, gentle-faced lady, mistress of an imposing colonial mansion in Braddock, Va., sat yesterday in the sunroom of her home and talked of the days when she drove a jitney bus to help her young struggling husband.

She is Mrs. Robert L. May, and today she is the wife of the president of the A., B. & W. Bus Line. The old jitney has been replaced by 100 modern buses that ply in and out of Washington.

The woman who proved herself so splendid a helpmate still proudly wears her honorary badge as "Bus Driver No. 1" of this city.

Mrs. May smoothed a pillow on the couch beside her and smiled reminiscently as she thought of those early times of hard toil and long hours out of doors in all sorts of weather.

"I did nothing any other woman wouldn't have done," she said modestly. "You see, my husband is the most wonderful man in the world." She pointed to his picture in a silver frame.

"He has the courage to fight for the things he wants. Well, I am a fighter, too, and it has been fun seeing it through together."

"We started out on this enterprise in 1921. He ran a Reo car; I drove a Ford truck with seats fitted in the back, from Barcroft to Washington.

"Many a night, after we had finished our routes, I held a flash light while he made repairs we could not afford to have done.

"After a while I graduated from the chauffeur's seat to the cashier's desk in the office as our business grew."

She laughed. "Yes, I took care of the money. My husband said I was so tight he didn't even dare buy a paper, but we had to save for better days."

"Still I got on well with our employes, when we began to hire others to help us. My boy called me "Mom," and soon that was my name for everybody. They were devoted to me and sent me flowers when I was sick, and have done many other lovely things for me."

Her hand strayed to the vase of holly beside her on the window sill, and she looked beyond them to the magnolias in the garden. "I love flowers," she said, "but still I miss the work and often just for fun, I go down there to the office and browse around."

Birth Control Banned

Mussolini's Paper Warns Fascists They Must Have Babies.

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP).—Another official alarm has been sounded all over Italy to warn the people that something must be done about the constantly falling birth rate.

The cry was broadcast in all the newspapers, including Mussolini's own Popolo D'Italia, of Milan. Fascists enjoying good posts were told that, generally speaking, they have failed to do their share in providing sizable families for the state.

Statistics quoted showed that births in 1932 were only 992,049. In 1924 they were 1,124,470.

This, despite the many millions from state funds during the last few years in prize awards for young mothers, newly weds; rent reductions and insurance facilities for couples with large families and numerous other special advantages for the heads of families.

Sounders of the official tocsin gleaned only sparse satisfaction from the decreasing death rate figures. They explained these merely came down to 607,546 in 1932 from the 1924 total of 662,870.

Brushing aside recent wordy reports that the population campaign was showing good results, Il Duce's paper tersely announced Italy's birth rate statistics are hovering close to the low level of those in France. It predicted that future voluntary sterility would be considered a form of personal suicide. It branded birth control as incompatible with morality and patriotism, and announced the government would henceforth agitate "without scruple or modesty" to make the public realize and fulfill its obligation to the state.

Women Crowd Cooking School On First Day

Ruth Chambers Discloses Secrets of Culinary Art.

The Cooking School is on!

At the Washington Auditorium yesterday Ruth Chambers expounded the art of cookery to thousands of Washington home makers. From the electrically equipped kitchen on the stage she unfolded before the audience the mysteries of economical and efficient food preparation.

Armed with booklets, recipes and souvenir pamphlets presented to them by The Washington Post, the housewives listened. Only the rustle of a turned paper or the moving of a pencil broke their interested silence.

Just once there was a flicker of amusement from the crowd, when a little boy, in a blue linen suit, wandered upon the stage.

"Hello," said the speaker, "would you like a graham cracker?"

The child nodded, assenting. A soft-footed assistant took him by the hand and led him out into the wings. In a moment he returned, placidly munching the promised cracker, climbed cautiously down the steep flight of stairs at the side of the stage, and returned to his mother.

The demonstration included the selection, cutting and preparation of meats, the preparation of several recipes, instructions concerning clothes washing, regulation and care of electrical refrigerators and stoves. Before the eyes of the women of the audience the various phases of cooking and home-care were carried out to the last detail by Miss Chambers' deft hands, supplemented by her expert suggestions.

In her crisp uniform, a spray of white gardenias blossoming on her shoulder, Miss Chambers personified culinary art, as she explained the ease with which families can enjoy the sanitation and convenience that modern methods afford.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

If November 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 8:45 a. m., from 1 to 2:10 p. m. and from 5:10 to 5:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 9:30 a. m., from 3 to 4:35 p. m. and from 7 to 7:30 p. m.

You will probably be forced to work under pressure on this date, and at terrific speed; do not let yourself be hurried off your feet. Influences operating on this date will tend to cause people to lose their poise. Both an outward and an inward calm will do much to bring about successful results.

The child born on this November 1 will have a very good opinion of itself without being unduly conceited; it will know its bad points as well as its good ones and will strive to improve itself in every way possible. A proud little one and one who values the good opinion of others. Thoroughly honest and to be trusted.

If November 1 is the date of your birth, you are probably a very business-like person. There is no fooling about you when you are at your work, nor do you stand for any nonsense from your coworkers. Where hard work, aggressiveness and an ability to get on with people are needed to put anything across, there is where you shine. You will not necessarily make a great deal of money, nor is it assured that you will rise to a high station in life. You may be doing anything from digging sewers to sitting in an executive's chair in some big concern, but whatever you are doing, you can be sure it is being done just a little bit better than the other fellow would do it. You are the type of person who brings new ideas into the business. You are valuable to yourself, consequently, valuable to others.

Born on November 1, your prime interest is in your work; next, your interests are centered in your home. Here, you are at your best, genial, easy going, hospitable, and deeply interested in all about you. In your home you wish to be away from the cares and worries, the noise and rush of the outer world; you do all that you can to maintain a happy and harmonious atmosphere therein. The women born on this date are most successful in making home all that it should be, both for their husbands and for their children. They are economical housekeepers, take a great interest in all that goes on in the home, and even when they can afford servants, they often prefer to do much of the work themselves.

Successful people born on November 1:

Morgan Dix, clergyman.
Charles Calverly, sculptor.
William M. Chase, artist.
Stephen Crane, noted American author.
Mme. Albani, singer.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Bureau of Rehabilitation Miss McGuire's Chief Interest.

Teacher and laborer in the field of human welfare, Miss Louise McGuire, instructor in social case work and child welfare at the National Catholic School of Social Service, finds time to serve on the boards of the Bureau of Rehabilitation and of the Council of Social Agencies. She has been a prominent figure in the work of the council, serving on some of its more important committees, and has taken active part in every welfare movement in the city, including the establishment of the Community Chest, in which she is a firm believer.

Miss McGuire sees a distinct welfare service in the work of the Bureau of Rehabilitation. She says:

"Teaching child welfare, I am naturally interested with anything that is constructive in dealing with children. For that reason I feel that the Bureau of Rehabilitation is important, for that organization is conducted for the purpose of learning why people have committed misdemeanors. If we could only learn what starts people on the downward path we would be able to deal with that situation in a more understanding manner.

"We do know that most criminals started as children by committing some slight offense and then gravitating into more serious phases. By means of the Bureau of Rehabilitation we shall be able to learn what treatment should be given to the child to keep him from desiring a life of crime and making of him an asset instead of a liability."

Boom in Books on History of Spanish Far West Is Starting.

Early history of the Spanish Far West is feeling a boom. "The Journey of the Flame," by Antonio de Fierro Blanco, to be published today by Houghton Mifflin, tells the story of a journey which a young Spaniard made through the three Californias a hundred years ago. Agnes Repplier in "Junipero Serra" gives the history of that indomitable Franciscan friar who founded the Spanish missions of California. It follows "Pere Marquette" and "Mere Marie of the Ursulines" as the third of Miss Repplier's biographies of pioneers of the church. Doubleday Doran will issue it on November 8.

"Paris is the city of the concierge," writes Paul Morand in "Paris to the Life." He turns on his own city the same sharp and penetrating eye which made his books "New York" and "London" of such excellence. Doris Spiegel, American Guggenhein Fellow, contributes 100 illustrations, of which M. Morand says they show "Paris as it is and not as the foreigner sees it." The book was published recently by the Oxford University Press, New York.

In the same hut at the MacDowell Colony in which DuBose Heyward wrote "Porgy," Cora Jarrett began "Night Over Fitch's Pond." Since 1926 she has written short stories for Vanity Fair and the Ladies Home Journal. Two were reprinted in Carolyn Wells' anthology, "Best Detective Stories." This novel, her first, has just appeared from the presses of Houghton Mifflin.

A mere handful of years after Sir William Osler said that "every man over 40 ought to be chloroformed," Prof. Walter B. Pitkin jumped to his feet with "Life Begins at Forty." The thought was worth the price of the book to 65,000 people. Now that Whittlesey House are printing yet another edition of the first anniversary, its total effect may be glimpsed in three examples—business executives have bought it in quantities to combat depression neuroses within their organizations, psychiatrists prescribe it for their patients, and a cosmetics manufacturer has used the phrase as a lure for women who have prematurely said farewell to their youth.

A homily. "FINDING A JOB." by Roger W. Babson: Revell. $1.50.

The Government should allot his quota of the unemployed to every manufacturer, and induce him to take them on. No sane employe would refuse. Such is the startling suggestion made by Roger W. Babson in his new book, "Finding a Job."

In spite of its platitudes, and in spite of the fact that it doesn't tell the reader how he may find a job—rather suggests, by a process of eliminations how he may fit himself for a job if he can find it—Babson has produced a very readable treatise. No two covers have ever before held so many proverbs for the unemployed, so many preachments for the poor.

A preface indicates his "original purpose was to help young people (and older ones, too, for that matter) to secure a job," but continues to confess the manuscript expanded itself to deal with "quite a diversity of subjects." And so it does; problems of government and payment of debts, among individuals and nations; the power of prayer and the duties of parents; fashions and fads in economics; technocracy, Communism, Socialism, poetry and favorite subject of the author's, statistics and their significance. Here is food for all, and up to the minute. Yesterday's events are chronicled in the light of their influence on today's difficulties.

Since such a welter of material is discussed in these pages, it is impossible to do more than suggest what his direct advice to young people in the present status is. Your goal, Babson declares, can never be more than happiness. This happiness he defines as more than economic security, although he assures us that this is a great part of it. More—be happy spiritually, physically and mentally; go to church, your doctor and some sort of study regularly. Work hard—do more than the job at hand; study the job of the man ahead of you. If you have no job at all, determine by stringent and practical analysis what one of the four great job groups you fit in best with—professional, engineering, manufacturing, merchandising, or agricultural. Choose then those reputable firms in your vicinitiy representing the selected job group. "Contact" them all, either by call or letter, and—sell your services straight. Carve yourself a place, let your employer determine by your worth to him what you shall be paid, whether you shall remain.

The book says much of practical value, be the reader 16 or 60. However, like all good advice, Babson is probably a voice crying in the wilderness. DON BLOCH.

What's in Fashion?

Evening Gloves and Bags Now Tie Up With Costume

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where articles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

New York, Nov. 1.—Handbags and gloves. Though they seem relatively small and unimportant in comparison with an evening dress or wrap, actually they are a most important part of the modern evening ensemble. And not to be passed over with a casual, "Oh, I have a pair of white kid gloves and a beaded bag left from last year."

Not that the white kid gloves and beaded bag are outmoded. Far from it. They not only are fashionable, but correct with almost any costume.

But there are ensembles which will look smarter and newer with something else. And two of these are the new velvet and satin costumes.

Velvet or Satin.

The idea with these is to wear velvet or satin gloves and carry a velvet or satin bag.

The gloves are long, of course, and slip-ons, fitting more or less casually. And the bag may be a soft pouch envelope, a framed bag or that convenient type with a handle to hang over your arm when dancing.

In addition to matching each other, you may want them to match some part of the costume, such as a flower, or slippers or jewelry. And when you make up such combinations as wine red gloves and bag with pale pink dress or bright blue ones with a white dress, you've added that bit of drama to your costume which fashion finds so important this season.

White With Black.

These colors can be used with a black dress, too, though many smart women prefer the sharp contrast of white gloves with black dresses. Use kid if you want a shiny accent on a dull crepe dress, or suede for a dull accent on a shining satin.

And black or brown glace kid are often worn to match the dress or wrap or to ensemble with shoes or bag.

You'll find more color in the popular beaded bags than formerly. In these the fabric of the bag is in color and the beads or sequins are applied so that the colored background shows through.

Right Accessories.

There are many gorgeous fabrics used in evening gowns this season. And each one should have its proper accessories. Just what these are is the subject of a leaflet which you may have by following instructions on the coupon below.

Plan the Meal Around Four-Pound Roast

Beef, Pork, Veal or Other Meats in Many Cuts Used.

By Ruth Chambers.

First, select your roast! The success of the dinner may be determined by your wise selection, and there are certain fundamental facts you should have in mind before you set out to do your shopping.

Beef is apt to be the first meat one thinks of for a roast, although pork, veal and lamb all provide savory roasts. But we shall talk about What cut do you wish? The prime ribs are the choicest for roasting. Next in preference comes the middle of the sirloin, which is especially desirable for a small family. If a large roast is required, the rump is to be commended. Chuck ribs may also be roasted.

Larded Fillets.

A word about fillets. The fillet does not ordinarily come from fat cattle and this lack of fat should be made up for by larding.

To lard meat, fat salt pork or bacon is cut into strips a quarter inch thick and equally wide and 2½ inches long. These strips are called lardoons. A larding needle may be used to draw the strips of fat through the upper surface, with the grain of the meat.

When a rib roast is chosen, the bones may be removed and the meat put into the form of rolled roast. When the ribs are left in it is a standing rib roast.

For roasting, the size of the meat should be at least four pounds. In general, allow about a half pound for each adult to be served.

Cuts of veal for roasting are the loin, leg, rib and rack. The breast and shoulder also make good roasts. These are best if boned and rolled.

To Prepare Loin.

The loin should be prepared for roasting by being rolled with the kidney in the center. The roll should be tied with a cord or fastened with skewers.

Veal should be cooked more slowly than beef and for a longer time. It is apt to be dry and for this reason should be cooked in a covered pan. However, to obtain a juicy roast, these methods may be used. Instead of covering the pan, place strips of fat pork, salt pork or bacon on top of the roast

Best roasting cuts of lamb are leg, loin, breast, shoulder and rack. The shoulder and breast may be boned and rolled; in fact, all cuts of lamb make very good roasts.

Cracked Wheat Good for Diets; Peanut Oil Best for Cooking.

"Some people who have to follow raw food diets use cracked wheat for breakfast," said the market man, pointing to a box of it.

"How is it prepared?" asked the Marketer.

"You can soak it overnight and eat it the next morning without cooking it, with honey or something, or you can cook it like a cereal. It's two pounds for 15 cents."

The market man's face lighted up.

"Here's something you can't get everywhere," he said, "something that is good for raw-food eaters. Black figs—20 cents a pound. They are large and rich in iron. Very good, too."

The Marketer made a note of this.

"What does that sign mean—dehydrated apricots?" was her next question.

"They are dried without the use of sulphur, which makes them more digestible for some folks—18 cents a ten-ounce package."

The Marketer's eyes traveled over the stall.

"What's this peanut oil? Is it used for cooking?" she asked.

"Yes," the market man patted his apron, "and it is better than most cooking oils because it can be used over and over again. You can fry fish in it one minute and doughnuts in it the next, because it doesn't hold the flavors. Only 45 cents a quart."

For today's menu, you can buy the greens, kale, mustard and spinach for 5 cents a pound; the carrots, two bunches for 15 cents, or 5 cents a pound loose; bacon, 20 cents a pound, unsliced. The Marketer has planned a meatless menu, but the cheese in the baked carrots has a meat value. American cheese, 25 cents a pound.

And, speaking of cheeses, they always have their place in a dessert course. Imported Edam cheese is $1.75 for a four-pound piece; Liederkranz is 25 cents a package; Camembert, 50 cents a box.

Baked Carrots With Cheese.

Cover the bottom of a baking dish with a layer of boiled carrots, cut lengthwise. Sprinkle with cheese, grated or cut in small pieces. Repeat. Top last layer of cheese with bacon strips. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the bacon has curled.

Says Happiness Is Beauty

Joan Blondell's advice to women is to be themselves, be joyful, healthy and happy. Beauty, she insists, will take care of itself.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills Hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. William McMaster Mills will have as their guests for a few days this week, Col. and Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, who will come from Baltimore, where they now make their home. Col. Cootes was formerly commandant of Fort Myer.

Stebbins at Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Stebbins, of New York, are now in Washington at the Mayflower for a short visit. Mr. Stebbins is a brother of Mrs. James Brady Mitchell, who, with Col. Mitchell, recently returned to the hotel for the winter.

Joy Makes for Beauty, Advises Joan Blondell

Personality, Cleanliness and Happiness Rules of Her System.

Be natural. Be yourself.

That in a nutshell is the advice given women by Joan Blondell, radiant blond screen actress, who will be seen in Washington soon in her latest film, "Footlight Parade."

Miss Blondell has revealed the secrets of what she believes are the means by which any woman can attain the most perfect beauty in her own type.

Personality is the secret of Miss Blondell's beauty method, before any of the more artificial beauty aids are brought into play.

"It is fatal," she says, "to attempt to copy the personality or coiffure of another woman whom you admire. What is attractive in the appearance of one is most unsuitable to another. Be yourself.

"Of course, there are some things it is important for every woman who wishes to radiate charm to observe. Her hair must have luster.

"Cleanliness is next to beauty. It does not matter how irregular your features may be if you have that freshness about you which comes from being immaculately sweet and clean.

"Perfume is one of my greatest delights, but I do not use it to extremes. It is the faintest breath of a well-chosen perfume which adds to a woman's attractiveness.

"Don't worry. Worry is the ogre who destroys natural beauty. Every woman is lovely in some way, but many women destroy their beauty by worrying about trifles. A happy face is the only knid of face which can be said to be 'a thing of beauty and a joy forever.'"

"It's the finest tasting bread"

MRS. HENRY STARKEY

MRS. STARKEY: "Stuffings and puddings just naturally taste better made with Bond Bread crumbs."

MISS LUNSFORD: "I never have any left for cooking. It disappears too fast in my house, my family love it so."

BOND can't help but be the finest tasting bread, when you consider these definite reasons why: (1) 43,040 of the best home bakers in America showed us how to give it that home-like flavor; (2) Every pure ingredient used in making is guaranteed, right on the wrapper; (3) Rising of Bond Bread dough is stopped at the flavor peak, so that finest tasting flavor can't escape; (4) Thru-and-thru baking brings out the full, delicious taste of every morsel. Try Bond Bread in a side-by-side comparison with any other bread and you'll convince yourself that—

Stocks Drop Seven-Tenths On Quiet Sales

Market Backs and Fills Sluggishly; Trading Cut to 1,152,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Markets were dull and somewhat lower in most directions today. Stocks closed a quiet, irregular session with a balance of net losses, largely of a fractional nature.

The R. F. C.'s gold price represented another new high at $32.12, but the dollar failed to sag more than moderately in terms of the leading foreign exchanges.

French francs were up a few points much of the day, while sterling ruled slightly higher. Transactions were reported small.

Gold Issues Fare Well.

Gold mining issues on the stock exchange fared rather well and miscellaneous metals tended to participate in their improvement. U. S. Smelting and Homestake were up about a couple of points net. Tobaccos slipped.

Farm implements paid scant attention to wheat's reaction, Harvester rising more than a point. U. S. Steel preferred, whose owners are to receive another 50-cent dividend, was down 1; the common closed virtually unchanged. For American Telephone, Allied Chemical, General Motors, Case, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, North American and New York Central final prices represented small changes either way. The average net loss was seven-tenths of a point. Volume was reduced to 1,152,000 shares.

Over the day, the market backed and filled sluggishly. Wall street felt encouraged by the steel rail price compromise and hoped the prospective business could be put through quickly so as to sustain the steel manufacturers during what is customarily a dull season.

U. S. Steel Report.

The steel corporation's third quarter report disclosed the best earnings since the first three months of 1931. This record was not entirely surprising when the brisk activity of last summer was recalled, and an improvement over the second quarter had, of course, been expected.

The financial community still seemed somewhat perplexed by the prospective gold operations in foreign markets. Many noted with satisfaction Washington dispatches which told of this country's assurances to Great Britain that we did not seek a monetary conflict; on the whole sentiment remained rather confused, which probably accounted for the stagnation in Wall street's leading market. Brokers generally reported a slackening of outside interest.

American Metal Market said output of steel ingots in the first ten months of this year had been approximately 45 per cent greater than in the entire year 1932 and that 1933 would probably show a gain of between 55 and 65 per cent over last year. "Settlement of the rail price controversary by a compromise which appears to leave no loose ends," it added, "produces a feeling of relief all around."

Goods Market.

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Cotton goods markets were quiet and slightly weaker today on some stray and finished cloths. Silk goods are selling better since a prolonged strike of dyers was adjusted. Wool goods continued quiet. Burlaps are firm, influenced largely by the course of foreign exchange.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Hop Prices Quiet.

Debt Accord Now Impossible

Immediate Collateral Effect of Our Newly Adopted Money Policy

By Ralph West Robey.

One of the immediate collateral effects of our newly adopted monetary policy is to put an end to all possibility of getting an agreement on the inter-allied debts at this time. Even before we decide to try the experiment of raising prices by changing the value of gold, the problem was difficult enough. Now, I should think, any solution is quite out of the question.

Perhaps, however, this is not of much importance. There has been an enormous change of public sentiment in this country about the debts in the last year, with the result that whether they are paid is viewed as a matter of relatively little import. We now have other things to think about. Instead of worrying, as we were a year ago, about what would happen if there was a default by the foreign nations, we now seem to take such a possibility as scarcely worthy of a moment's attention.

A Year Ago the Debts Were Viewed as Primary Problem.

A year ago the argument was that if there was a default it would be a world shattering blow to public confidence in all long-term obligations. It was held that if these debts were not paid it would start a series of defaults that would extend certainly from one end of this country to the other, and perhaps to other countries as well. It was felt, accordingly, that every effort must be made to prevent such a default.

Now, of course, we have gone through with the experience of a default. France, it will be recalled, has failed to pay the last two installments. England met the payment last December in full, but made only a token payment in June. Although this token payment amounted to only 8 or 9 per cent of the amount due it was held by President Roosevelt as being an indication of good faith sufficient to keep England from being technically in default.

To the public at large, however, the token payment probably has no such meaning. Rather, it, in combination with the two French defaults, meant that the war debts were through for all practical purposes insofar as our getting any more money is concerned. In other words, it meant that there had been general default by nations whose credit standing was at the top of the list. Within the last year, accordingly, there has been ample time to test the accuracy of the dire predictions of such defaults.

Effects of Default Have Been About as Was Expected.

On the whole, it seems to me that these effects have been much as expected. During this time we have had wholesale defaults, a growing disregard for the sanctity of contracts and an increasing overriding of laws in connection with financial policies and practices. I can think of no particular in which we could have done much more than we have in living up to the predictions made a year ago as a probable effect of a failure to get the interallied debts paid.

It seems to me, too, that this has been, and is, a severe handicap in our business structure and our chances of recovery. Everywhere today there is a feeling of uncertainty and the fear that if a long-term commitment is made it may be undermined. No country can prosper in the presence of such uncertainty. Rather, the first requisite of recovery, either here or anywhere else is to have a condition where business men will be willing to make long-term commitments and take risks extending over a considerable period of time. Insofar as our own problem is concerned now, however, the task has to do with our domestic policies, not with the interallied debts.

Bond Market Continues Sag As Buying Ebbs

Trend Improves in Final Trading; Sales Drop to $10,000,000.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Buying interest in bonds continued at low ebb today and prices yielded ground in virtually all of the active groups.

The trend improved slightly in the late trading but such rallies as occurred were scarcely of sufficient vigor to even up earlier losses. The average of 60 representative domestic corporate loans declined .4 of a point. The volume of transfers approximated $10,000,000 against $12,448,000 on Monday.

U. S. Governments slipped off all through the list, although final quotations were a shade above the lowest at declines of 1-32 to 1-032 of a point. High ratings in the domestic corporation list were slightly irregular, but in general their action indicated somewhat better support than in the market yesterday.

The secondary categories, as usual, adjusted their pace to the market for equities, which afforded no substantial base for bullish operations. Low priced rails were soft barring a few issues in which bids took good care of offerings. There were many declines ranging from fractions to 2 points in the carrier group as in several of the more speculative utilities and industrials.

Foreign loans were less responsive to movements in foreign exchange which continued to favor European currencies. The general trend was irregular with moderate losses in the obligations of Great Britain, France, Norway, Italy and several of the South American nations.

Foreign Markets.

Oct. 31 (A.P.).

London—With trading dull in view of the holiday tomorrow, profit-taking on the stock exchange caused general moderate price recessions. Gold shares especially declined on the lower price of bar gold, while uncertainty regarding developments in America halted any improvement in transatlantic issues. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Prices on the bourse fluctuated indecisively as American gold plans kept cautious speculators out of the market. Trading was limited to month-end liquidations. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was dull with almost a total lack of orders. The market closed weaker.

Foreign Beer Buying Sinks In September

American purchases of foreign beer in September were only 6 per cent of those recorded for May, the peak month for beer imports since legalization went into effect, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's division of statistics.

Customs figures show imports of "malt liquors" during September amounted to 55,000 gallons compared with 985,000 gallons in May, 868,000 gallons in June, 255,000 gallons in July and 57,000 gallons in August.

During the six-month period, April to September, imports of malt liquors into the United States amounted to 2,290,000 gallons, valued at $1,732,500.

These imports originated in all parts of the world, the report shows, the chief supplying countries being Canada, United Kingdom, Germany and Japan. The countries accounting for the bulk of September imports were the Philippine Islands, Mexico and Germany.

Cotton Prices Recover After Early Decline

December Sells at 9.53 as Market Closes 3 Points Up to 4 Down.

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Cotton was quiet today with a moderate early decline followed by recoveries on trade buying and covering. December contracts after selling off to 9.44 closed at 9.53, with the general market steady net 3 points higher to 4 points lower.

The opening was barely steady at an advance of 2 points to decline of 6 points. There was some buying on the relatively steady Liverpool cables which appeared to be readily supplied by realizing and overnight selling from the South. Hedging was not active, but there was scattering liquidation combined with Western, and local selling which increased somewhat following reactions in the stock market and the easier opening of wheat. Active months worked about 5 to 14 points net lower during the morning with May selling off to 9.79, but the comparatively light offerings were absorbed by trade and commission houses and the market showed a generally steady undertone during the afternoon. May closed at 9.87 with last prices generally showing rallies of 8 or 10 points from the lowest. July which had been relatively firm yesterday was relatively easy today showing the maximum decline.

The falling off in the volume of general business was attributed to a disposition to await a further development of the Administration's monetary policies or possibly a better line on the probable showing of the next Government crop report. Exports today 61,950 making 2,382,362 so far this season. Port receipts 101,002. U. S. port stocks 3,947,870.

Gold Buying Called Logical Federal Move

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—One Wall Street reaction to President Roosevelt's move to buy gold abroad was summed up today in the opinion that it is a logical and unavoidable step in the monetary policy on which he has embarked.

Some financial observers expressed fear, however, of a currency contest between nations which they felt might ultimately end the international gold standard as it has previously existed.

Retaliation by other nations, if carried to extremes, might bring chaos to the international money situation, they said, and they expressed hope that this would not eventuate.

Some other economists, including John Maynard Keynes of England, have urged general abandonment of the gold standard, and a revaluation of currencies on gold.

A primary point involved in the situation, some Wall Street quarters felt, is the danger that Great Britain, in order to defend her trade position, might be compelled to compete with the United States for gold if the American policy resulted in sharp depreciation of the dollar.

Sir Robert Horne, former chancellor of the British exchequer, recently said "we have got to defend our trade position, and we can not let it get into a condition of unreality. The ratio between sterling and the dollar must be watched and must not be permitted to get out of due proportion."

The effect on France was another problem. That country has about $3,300,000,000 in gold, and as long as she stays on the gold standard she will have to sell it on demand. But France is in a budgetary crisis and the French fear of inflation is strong. Bankers here doubt therefore whether she would permit any large outflow of the precious metal.

Foreign exchange dealers, however, did not foresee any necessity, under present conditions, for the United States to buy large quantities of gold abroad, providing dollar depreciation meets with no opposition there.

Richfield Oil Receivership Found Costly

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—Federal equity receivership of the Richfield Oil Co. from January 15, 1931, to last September 1, cost nearly a million dollars, it was brought out today in questioning of Federal Judge William P. James, before the United States Senate Committee investigating receiverships and bankruptcies.

During that period, said William H. Neblett, of Los Angeles, counsel for the committee and law partner of United States Senator William G. McAdoo, the Richfield property was operated at a net loss of $10,594,210, not including accrued interest on bonds.

Costs of receivership during the period totaled $974,365.20, he said. Of this sum, William G. McDuffie, receiver, got $255,835.82, lawyers for the receiver got $336,558.18 for fees and expenses, appraisers $136,823.71 and auditors $245,147.50.

Bright Spots Are Found in World Trade

(Associated Press.)

Several bright spots were seen in the world trade picture yesterday as the Commerce Department summarized the week's developments, although unsettled political conditions in some parts of the world were reflected.

In Argentina, the outlook was reported strengthened by sustained demands for merchandise, better crop prospects and rising wool prices; and in Mexico foreign trade was reported rising steadily, with optimism increased.

Canadian export trade during September gained, and increased stability was reported in Greek conditions.

A moderate demand was cited for heavy chemicals in the United Kingdom, where woolen activity was well maintained and steel markets continuing to improve. A gradual upswing also was shown in Austrian business.

In Cuba, however, the situation remained "confused and uncertain," with business restricted.

Political uncertainties were said to have aggravated the economic situation in Ecuador.

In Germany certain gains in industry and employment were recorded, "but there is still an absence of definite improvement."

Import purchases by the government was termed the leading factor in Bolivia. Import business was reported curtailed in Colombia in October, with little change in Central America.

New York City Finds Pact With Bankers

New York, Oct. 31 (AP).—Enough money to finance New York City for the next four years was assured today with the signing of an agreement with the city's bankers by Mayor John P. O'Brien and Comptroller George McAneny.

The first loan of $25,000,000 to meet pay rolls and other expenses was expected to be made later today after the bankers sign the agreement.

The pact was approved by the board of estimate shortly after midnight, but its content was not made public pending completion of formalities later today.

It was believed, however, to embrace the agreement drawn up at a conference with Gov. Lehman late in September which provides for a revolving fund of approximately $200,000,000 for the years 1934 to 1937, the refunding of about $203,000,000 of outstanding revenue bills and the sale by the bankers of $70,000,000 relief bonds.

Irrigation May Save State's Cranberry Crop

Plainfield, Wis., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—One of the world's greatest cranberry raising areas, swamp and bog lands near here, will be flooded shortly in an effort to save this year's crop, with water brought from Wisconsin Rapids 15 miles away.

The water will flow into a ditch now being constructed at a cost of $50,000. Because of dry weather, the cranberry crop ripened late this year. Raisers fear that the yield will be lost unless there is water in the swamp land to keep out the frost.

Beer Ends Famed Cafe.

Jaurez, Mexico, Oct. 31 (U.P.). Legalization of 3.2 beer and hard times have written finis to the history of the Popular Cabaret here. Grace Martino, operator of the place, which once headlined the Calle Diablo with more than 40 girl entertainers, said she planned to open a restaurant in New Mexico.

Radio Waves and Ripples

BROADCASTING of dance music from the Russian Troika by WJSV was canceled yesterday because operators of the Capital night club and restaurant were unable to agree with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers upon how much should be paid for a license to perform the works of popular melody composers it controls.

The society holds more than 90 per cent of the performance rights on popular music. Without one of its licenses an organization playing for dancers and radio listeners the music it controls is liable for suit.

The night club was said to have been ready to pay for such a license one-half of the price asked by the society.

The WJSV minds said they had waited for two weeks for the restaurant operators to settle the dispute before deciding to cancel a schedule that called for broadcasting Wednesdays and Fridays at 1:30 p. m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 p. m. They were afraid continued broadcasting would result in suit by the society.

And when found in about two weeks, she will be the only female staff announcer in the Capital, unless the minds over in some of the other stations decide they want one, too.

It's all an experiment the minds are making, one of those things that pop up now and then whenever the big minds tell the ones with the smaller salaries to go out and think up something different.

It was for WJSV's early morning blast, the Sun Dial, that the minds wanted to be different this time; and it was Robert Trout, announcer, second assistant program director and current Dialist, who came up with the idea.

So, when the minds have found the just-right female voice, one that will please women listeners without irritating men, they mean to put its owner in complete charge of the Sun Dial.

Hunting will begin with an audition Monday from which the 12 most satisfactory voices will be selected for a special audition a week later. From this group six will be picked and put on the air.

Further decision will then be tossed into the bed quilts of the listeners, relieving the minds, theoretically at least, of a share of the responsibility for what happens on subsequent Sun Dial broadcasts.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Debate, National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the British system of radio operation and control," 3 p. m.; Lum and Abner, 7:30 p. m.; Chase & Sanborn, 8 p. m.

WMAL—Lowell Thomas, 6:45 p. m.; Gems of Melody, 7:15 p. m.; John McCormack singing with William Daly's String Orchestra, 9:30 p. m.

WJSV—Frank and Jim McCravy, hillbilly singers, 6:45 p. m.; Albert Spaulding, Conrad Thibault and Don Vorhees' Orchestra, 8:30 p. m.; Salute to WBBM, Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, Boswell Sisters and others, 11 p. m.

WOL—Radio Opportunity Night, finals, 7:30 p. m.; Chicago Opera Co., 10 p. m.; Night on the Volga, vocal and instrumental rendition of Russian music, 10:30 p. m.

Kurt G. Fell, German Broadcasting System representative, was back in the Capital yesterday preparing for the renewal of his biweekly broadcasts of goings-on in America to the people back home.

The Fell talks will originate in WRC, will reach Berlin via a New York and Schenectady and will be shortwaved back to New York so N. B. C. engineers can check up on reception. We learned yesterday that it takes one-thirtieth of a second for the Fell voice to get back to New York. Nothing will be heard in this country. It's going to be in German, anyway

Al Houghton, Kenwood golf professional, begins a series of talks boosting the National Capital Open Tournament on one of the N. B. C. stations Friday at 6:35 p. m. There will be a 15-minute boost a week later.

Announcer Bob Youse expects to preface his high school football broadcasts with explanations of football terms just to be sure every one will understand him when he starts to get technical. Next high school game broadcast will be Friday, 3 p. m., Central-Tech.

"Why Tabloids?" is to be asked of Harvey Duell, New York Daily News editor, by William Lundell on WRC at 4:15 this afternoon.

WJSV is helping the Italians celebrate their Armistice Day, which comes a week earlier than ours, with a speech in Italian and the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" Saturday at 5 p. m.

Representative Isabella Greenway wandered into the stage entrance of the Earle looking for WJSV's new studios the night she broadcast with Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford Tugwell. She had to find one of the junior executives before she could find out where to go. The stage hands didn't know.

Inset is Ferde Grofe, "Grand Canyon Suite" and "Tabloid" composer, who conducts Fred Allen's Salad Bowl Revue on N. B. C. Fridays at 9 p. m.

WOL is whispering the name of Albert F. Kunze, president of the Washington Philatelic Society and its own Stamp Club of the Air broadcaster, as the successful applicant for the job of stamp division superintendent in the Postoffice Department.

The minds of the A. B. S. station have returned Symphonic Interlude to its regular 7 o'clock spot tonight even if the show is only a recording. There were too many letters protesting its removal.

National Farm and Home Hour broadcasters are on the verge of a climax, if people who radio six days out of every week can be said to be near anything.

The national corn husking contest on the Ben Stalp farm, five miles north of West Point, Nebr., is the climax. With Agriculture Secretary Wallace, originator of corn-husking contests, speaking from Washington as an opener, N. B. C. will radio the event during the National Farm and Home Hour program Thursday, November 9.

National starts a series of one-hour Thursday afternoon symphony broadcasts next week, using either the Rochester Philharmonic or the Eastman School Symphony Orchestra until the middle of February.

The Rochester unit opens the series November 9 and will continue with concerts November 16, January 11 and 18 and February 4. Nikolai Sokoloff will be the opening concert conductor. Other baton wielders will be Guy Fraser Harrison, Fritz Reiner and Sir Hamilton Harty. Sokoloff has handled the New York and Cleveland Orchestras.

On remaining Thursdays, Dr. Howard Hanson and Samuel Belov will bring the Eastman Orchestra into the studio, starting November 23.

The series has been assigned the 3 to 4 p. m. period.

Ripples.

"Duna" and Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me" are Barytone John Herrick's solos on the Gems of Melody show, N. B. C., 7:15 tonight. . . . WMAL carries another Warden Lawes "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing" drama to the Capital tonight at 9. . . . On WRC, Anne Guthrie, former continental seretary for the Y. W. C. A. in Beunos Aires, will be available on the Woman's Radio Review program, talking about "New Women of Latin America," 3:30 p. m. today. . . . Aida Ward, Cotton Club Revue, singing "Hold Your Man" and "Here You Come With Love," tops the Harlem Serenade bill on Columbia at 8:30 tomorrow night. . . . Frazier Hunt, news writer, on Columbia's National Student Federation tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, handles "Which—Football or Revolution for Students?" . . . as bad as all that, Mr. Hunt? . . . Evelyn MacGregor and Evan Evans, contralto and barytone, are soloists in Andre Kostelanetz Presents tomorrow night at 9, C. B. S., and Gladys Rice sings a Verdi aria, "Pace, Pace," on the same chain that night at 10:45.

Body of Slain Girl Identified

Gaspe, Que., Oct. 31 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Ascah today identified the mangled and partly clothed body of their 15-year-old daughter, Maud.

Identification was made at the inquest under Coroner Dr. E. Pouliot, who adjourned proceedings to November 7 following official report by Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medico-legal expert.

Meanwhile dragging of the bay continued. Police are convinced Marguerite Ascah, 17, met the same fate as her cousin, Maud. Both disappeared from their homes on August 30.

Dr. Fontaine said his examination revealed the girl was gagged and thrown into Gaspe Bay alive after her skull had been fractured by a blunt instrument. When taken from the water Saturday, the body was minus legs and arms, probably dislocated through the action of cross-currents in the bay.

Eastman Expects Lower Rail Rates

Savings, Better Equipment Also Planned for Lines.

Lower rates, searching economies and improved equipment is the cumulative answer of the railroads, worked out in cooperation with the Federal Administration, to dwindling revenues, according to the Associated Press.

New steps yesterday made this broad program of Joseph B. Eastman, the rail coordinator, increasingly clear as a part of the reorganization of the roads to meet competition.

Thief Enters Church, Gets Typewriter, Cash

Another "meanest thief" is at large. Early yesterday he broke into the Church of the Nativity, 6008 Georgia avenue northwest, and escaped with the church's typewriter and $3 in cash.

The Rev. John Fenton, who reported the robbery to police, said the burgler broke a window and removed the screen.

Will Plead Not Guilty In Slaying of Scientist

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 31 (AP).—James Deshler and Marshall Bowles, charged with slaying Dr. Adolph Sommer, Cambridge scientist and manufacturer, today pleaded not guilty. They were held without bail until November 14.

Mrs. Marion Blenkhorn, mother of a 4-year-old boy, charged with being an accessory after the fact, also pleaded not guilty. Dr. Sommer was slain in a $1,000 pay-roll holdup.

Barrel of Apples Fine Again Imposed on Man

Topeka, Oct. 31 (AP).—Willard Mayberry, secretary to Gov. Alf M. Landon, was fined a barrel of apples—a State legislature custom—yesterday when he was discovered seated in the chair of a house member.

Today he drew another fine, a barrel of Kansas apples, when representatives discovered the apples with which he paid his first fine were from another State.

$95,009,510 Reported as Total in September.

A decline in Reconstruction Corporation loans in September, compared with August and July, was reported yesterday to South Trimble, clerk of the House, according to the Associated Press.

The report, submitted by Jesse H. Jones, chairman, showed advances totaling $95,009,510 were authorized in September, compared with $111,495,528 in August and $137,445,973 in July.

Loans authorized amounting to $7,173,491 either were withdrawn or canceled in September. In the same month the corporation sold $30,000,000 in debentures to the Treasury, making the total outstanding, $1,720,000,000.

Liquor Fattening, Says Dr. Fishbein

Oklahoma City, Oct. 31 (AP).—Mae West styles and prohibition repeal likely would make Americans a more corpulent race, says Dr. Morris Fishein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The Mae West renaissance and the cocktail will go hand in hand in adding pounds to the average American," he told the Oklahoma Clinical Conference here today. "The average highball is equal to three hard-boiled eggs. A cocktail is equal to three slices of bread and butter, and a bottle of beer is equivalent to a plate of ham and eggs."

100,000 See Halloween Parade Here

Spirit of Revelry Rules as Huge Crowds Jam Streets.

Prize Winners Named for Floats and Other Contestants.

The spirit of revelry pervaded the annual Halloween parade, with its bevy of witches and hobgoblins which last night marched past 100,000 merrymakers, assembled under a pale autumnal moon.

Led by a detail of Metropolitan Police under Maj. Ernest W. Brown, with Col. John W. Oehmann, of the District National Guard, as grand marshal, the parade marched down Pennsylvania avenue from Four and a Half street and then to the Ellipse, while cheering thousands lined either side of the route.

The revelers were reviewed on Constitution avenue by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer, and the Queen of the Pageants, Miss Mary Yates.

Others Review Parade.

Other civic leaders and the parade committee of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, viewed the procession.

When the parade had ended, band concerts were held on Constitution avenue and award of prizes was announced by Thomas P. Littlepage. The winners are:

Floats—Local and civic class: First, Civitan Club; floats, local and commercial, first, Woodward & Lothrop; decorated private vehicles, first, "Gay Nineties;" noncommercial class, first, L. A. McCrae with his Ford car taking news reel pictures; individual costume, marchers, first, "Uncle Sam and the Blue Eagle;" local costume group, first, "Early Birds;" out-of-town costume group, first, Esperanto Association of Washington. The first place in the band section of the parade went to the Washington Gas Light Co.

Prizes will be delivered to winners today at the offices of the Board of Trade, 204 Star Building. Mr. Hodges will be in charge.

Streets Are Jammed.

Funmaking was the spirit of the parade as thousands of gay celebrators jammed the downtown streets, to view the procession of decorated floats and costumed marchers. The spirit of harvest time pervaded the floats, entered by civic groups and commercial organizations.

Three full-blood Indians, Red Tomahawk, Cowboy Gee and Same Bend, rode steeds in the first section, which was led by Loew's Fox Band. In this section were members of citizens' associations and other civic organizations.

Bands and drum and bugle corps which marched were: The Washington Gas Light Co. Band, Victory Post Drum and Bugle Corps, American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, 121st Engineers Band, and the George Washington University Band.

Hospitals reported a deluge of minor casualties. Disorders were few, police said, and the number of arrests was not unusual.

False alarms played an important part in the scores of police and fire calls. Exploding firecrackers brought shooting reports and false alarms were many.

Halloween Celebrators Jam Downtown Streets

Crowds of gay celebrators packed F street near Fourteenth street. The clown on the lower left evoked laughter and plaudits from the spectators of the parade. In case the F street merchant wants to know who marked down his wares, he has the culprits at the lower right.

"Film" Man Named By Girl Missing

Accused of Offering Test for Screen in Hotel.

Search for a man who has been representing himself as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Corporation agent and attempting to lure girls to his hotel on promise of a "film test," was stopped yesterday.

The man attempted to entice a lunch room waitress to his room on the promise of a part in new picture if she passed the "test." The girl notified M. G. M. officials, who asked police to investigate.

Several telegrams sent to the girl by the man were signed "Mr. Burkhart." Police were unable to find him at the hotel address he gave.

Death Notes!

Man and Wife Accuse Each Other of Mailing Them.

William Smith, colored, of 1305 R street northwest, doesn't mind an occasional note saying he is doomed to die, but when circulars advertising an undertaking establishment start to arrive it is a little too much for him.

So William had his wife, Evelyn, arrested, charged with threatening his life. Evelyn, in Police Court yesterday, denied writing the notes or sending the circulars.

Then Assistant District Attorney Roger Robb had her write a similar note in court. Both he and Judge McMahon agreed that the handwriting looked identical and the case was about to come to a close.

But Evelyn had an ace in the hole, and she accused William of remailing the threatening notes and the funeral circulars to her. The case was continued until November 17, with William's record, if any, to be looked up.

Parking Space For Downtown Area Enlarged

Lease of 18,000 Square Feet Just Concluded in Financial District.

Another large parking area will be provided for the downtown business section in a lease just concluded for approximately 18,000 square feet in the financial district within the block bounded by I, Fifteenth and H streets northwest and Vermont avenue.

By the agreement, Service Parking Corporation, a Delaware corporation, secures the site of the three-story Edward apartment building having a 50-foot frontage on Fifteenth street between the Shoreham office building and the McLean town residence.

Other Apartments Included.

The Parking corporation also secures the site of the Gramercy, four-story apartment building at 825 Vermont avenue and premises Nos. 813, 815 and 821 on that avenue.

Terms and duration of the lease were not made public. The property was leased by the John R. McLean estate. Negotiations were conducted by Frank P. Leetch, agent for the trustee, the American Security & Trust Co.

This lease marks the fifth large acquisition of parking space in the city by a unit of Service Parking Ground, Inc. In August, it secured from the Evening Star Newspaper Co., 17,700 square feet of property at the southwest corner of Tenth and E streets northwest.

Large Plots Downtown.

In January, it acquired more than 10,000 square feet on the site of the former Builders Exchange building at 719-721 Thirteenth street northwest. It also has leased a large lot next to the former City Club building on G street northwest and another on L street northwest in the rear of Dulin & Martin Co.'s store.

The corporation, which has 35 parking lots in operation in Detroit, is said to contemplate a plan of similar magnitude for Washington. Max Goldberg is president of the corporation which has paid an annual rental of $50,000 for one of the best situated lots in Detroit. The corporation placed in operation the first downtown parking lot in Detroit in 1917.

3 Overcome Fighting Blaze

2,000 Watch Warehouse Burn and Cheer Rescue.

Three firemen were overcome by smoke last night as flames partially burned a warehouse of the Penn Paper & Stock Co., at 1514 Eckington place northeast, while a crowd of 2,000 cheered their rescue.

The firemen who were carried to safety from the second floor are H. M. Maddox and William Deffer, of No. 12 Engine Company, and L. B. Wilson, of No. 6 engine. They were taken to Emergency Hospital.

Eight engines and three trucks responded to two alarms, turned in after a blaze spread from waste on the second floor. The fire was believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion.

Virginia Youth Injured Here In Moat Fall

After plunging 35-feet into a dark moat surrounding the Department of Commerce Building, a 13-year-old boy lay injured and helpless more than 30 minutes last night, before aid arrived.

James Wilson came from Barcroft, Va., to see the Halloween parade. He climbed to the top of a cement areaway at the Fifteenth street entrance to the Commerce Deparment.

There he watched. The moat was dark and the boy apparently did not realize its depth. Epecting a short drop he stepped into space.

He fell on cement flooring. Horrified spectators rushed to the wall. Police were called. An ambulance arrived. For almost 20 minutes rescuers attempted to reach the injured boy.

A building guard finally located a key. While a physician and police waited in the hallway, the guard questioned the boy. A duplicate key was sent for. Finally the doctor and police were admitted.

Several minutes elapsed before iron gates were opened to permit entrance of the ambulance. James was taken to Emergency Hospital. He suffered possible fractures to both legs.

Girl Scouts at "Little House" Show Bed-Making to Notables

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Taft Among Day's Visitors.

(Associated Press.)

Yesterday was a gala day at the Girl Scouts' "Little House," where two former President's widows, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft, a President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall, and a "Cabinet wife," Mrs. Cordell Hull, were guests.

It was Mrs. Wilson's first visit to the individualistic headquarters of the organization of which she was named honory president by virtue of having been First Lady of the land. Modeled after Payne's "Home, Sweet Home" the "Little House" is used to teach home-making.

"I've had a liberal education in bed-making," Mrs. Wilson said as she made her adieus after watching Girl Scouts change sheets with a "patient" in bed. In their bandaging, their hammock making and sewing, she also evidenced much interest.

2 Caught Sawing Bars On Fur Shop Window

Caught sawing bars on a rear window of Acherman's fur shop, 1730 Connecticut avenue northwest, early yesterday, two men are being held at the Third Police Precinct.

The men said they are Ernest Ross, 34, and Bruno Nordio, 28. Both are known to police here and in New York, Capt. Edward J. Kelly, precinct commander, said.

Lawyers Flay Blood Tests For Autoists

Van Duzer Scheme Held Unconstitutional by Legal Experts.

Meeting Called on New Plan to Measure Drunkenness.

Members of the Washington Bar said last night Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer was heading into almost unsurmountable legal difficulties in his proposal that a blood test be given auto drivers suspected of drunkenness.

Van Duzer announced yesterday that he and a group of psychologists had been studying the drunken driving problem and were of the opinion the blood test would offer the best solution.

However, attorneys interviewed declared that any attempt to force a person to submit to the taking of a sample of his blood would violate the constitutional rights of the individual.

The breaking of a person's skin and removing blood for analysis, without his consent, would constitute assault, according to legal experts.

Meeting Is Called.

Van Duzer said he intended to work out the details of the blood test plan before repeal of prohibition. He has called a meeting of psychologists and police officials for next Tuesday morning to consider plans for adoption of the test.

Those invited are Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown, Dr. F. A. Moss, George Washington University professor of psychology; Dr. Row W. Crum, Prof. Walter R. Miles, of Yale University; Dr. Oscar Hunter, and Dr. H. C. Dickenson, of the Bureau of Standards.

Van Duzer said the walking of chalk lines and other tests now in use have been discarded because courts have held that they do not clearly indicate intoxication.

Expects Trouble After Repeal.

He points out the blood test has been used successfully in Sweden. It would be fair to both heavy and light drinkers, he said, as medical opinion believes that the amount of alcohol in the blood is an accurate index of the degree of intoxication it is causing.

The Traffic Director believes the police department should be intrusted with the working of the plan. It would need a chemist and an assistant to carry it out, he added.

Apparently anticipating an increase in traffic difficulties with the repeal of prohibition, the traffic director says he wants an infallible test that will stand up in court and yet be fair to the individual.

Negligence Kills 1,240.

Failure of drivers and pedestrians to observe traffic signal lights caused the deaths of 1,240 pedestrians and injuries to 44,630 last year, W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, said yesterday. The figures are based on a survey by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

"Until people make up their minds that automobile rules and regulations, signal devices and safety codes are of prime importance to safe motor vehicle operation, vehicle authorities will not be able to improve traffic conditions very much," Van Duzer said.

He has completed a series of posters designed to aid in preventing automobile accidents. The posters have been displayed in 10,000 gasoline stations in 15 States and the District. The campaign was made possible by motor vehicle authorities, eight major oil companies and the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, Van Duzer said.

Blind Landing Tests By Big Planes Planned

Blind landing tests with multi-motored transport planes will be made at the Newark, N. J. Airport, it was announced yesterday by Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics, Department of Commerce.

A trimotored plane equipped with a small receiving set for landing beams, an instrument for registering signals of the runway localizing beacon and an approximate distance indicator will be used.

War Department Spends $206,574 at 2 Forts

Contracts totaling $206,574 were awarded yesterday for construction at Fort Humphreys, Va., and Fort Meade, Md., under the public works program, the War Department announced.

The sum of $164,900 will be used for an electric system at Fort Humphreys and $41,674 for two warehouses at Fort Meade.

Public Warned Against Fire Fund Solicitors

Warnings were issued yesterday by Montgomery County police against two men, traveling in a light car with District tags, who have been soliciting funds for the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department.

Karl Reid at 75 Says Knitting Keeps Old Age at Bay for Men

KARL REID,

75, who says he can do anything with a needle that can be done with a needle. Anyway, he is a champion knitter and will prove it at his home, 730 Eighth street northeast.

Expects to Use Needles 20 Years More; Wear for Women Popular.

Knitting, better than golf, horseshoe pitching or world tours, keeps old age at bay for man, in the opinion of Karl Reid, 75, who lives at 730 Eighth street northeast. And doing an intricate yard of Irish crochet or a square of beautiful needlepoint embroidery provides a tonic, the like of which can not be obtained otherwise, he holds.

Mr. Reid should know, for acquaintances say he has more of his handicraft in circulation among the feminine population of Washington than any other individual of sewing fame. For 20 years he has been making alluring knitted garments from prosaic balls of yarns. And he's still at it!

The present vogue for hand-woven dresses, blouses and twin sweaters keeps Mr. Reid pretty constantly at his knitting in his little apartment. However, he points out that this present-day liking for knitted clothing is no sudden rise of a new mode. The city has an element of elite groups who have been devoted to knitted dresses for two decades.

He does not require numerous fittings or any at all to have the result adhering like the proverbial glove. He has only to get the up-and-down and crosswise dimensions, so to speak. It's mathematical calculations that do the trick.

Born in 1858 at Washington while his mother was on a visit to relatives, he was taken back to Germany to join the remainder of the family as soon as the Civil War restrictions permitted travel. He grew up in Prussia, with six brothers and sisters, several of whom are still living in Germany. Suffering from consumption, he was sent to visit his uncle Joseph Reid in this city.

From a sister who had kept house for him, he had picked up knitting and various types of needlework. He made gifts for his friends. His health fared so well in Washington that he determined to remain here. He could not speak a word of English but formed a mercantile alliance with an old playmate of childhood days, Theodore Ruppert, then in the grocery business.

It was not until he abandoned business after Mr. Ruppert moved away that his needlecraft displayed in the window of a tailoring establishment attracted the notice of a fair resident of Cleveland Park. She paid him a dollar for teaching her to do a few stitches like those in the display and from this beginning scores of classes, clubs and individual lessons have flowed on through the years.

Next to doing the work himself, Mr. Reid would rather teach others to purl and drop a stitch than do anything else in a world of speed and industrial codes.

Finnan Sworn In As Head of Parks

Becomes First Holding Post of Superintendent.

C. Marshall Finnan was sworn in yesterday as superintendent of National Capital Parks, becoming the first holder of that post. Frank T. Gartside had been acting superintendent since the department was created several months ago to take the place of the old Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks.

Mr. Finnan's appointment was announced October 19 by Secretary of Interior Ickes, but it was not officially confirmed until yesterday. The new superintendent was sworn in at his office in the Navy building in the presence of Arno B Cammerer, chief of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations in the Interior Department.

One of Mr. Finnan's first official acts was to inspect erection of stands for last night's Halloween celebration. He was accompanied by Mr. Gartside, his assistant.

Real estate owned by the Georgetown plant of the Washington Gas & Light Co. yesterday was valued at $1,350,000 by an expert witness at the opening of the gas valuation hearing by the Public Utilities Commission.

The value was estimated by Harold E. Dayle, appraisal expert, presented by the gas company as its first witness. Lengthy technical descriptions of real estate owned or used by the company marked the testimony. Mr. Doyle will take the witness chair again when the hearings are resumed at 10 a. m. today and give his estimate of the value of the east plant property on the Anacostia River and other company real estate.

Cross examination of real estate witnesses by William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, and Richmond B. Keech, people's counsel, will be delayed until direct testimony is ended.

Testimony was begun after Riley E. Elgen, acting chairman, announced the commission's decision overruling a motion by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations for indefinite postponement of the valuation proceedings until the question of ownership had been finally ruled on by a court of last resort.

Mr. Roberts, as counsel for the commission, said no information had become available which would justify the commission reopening the question which was settled for the time being by a consent decree of the District Supreme Court a year ago.

Bank Cleared In $300,000 Damage Suit

Claimed Institution Was Liable for Action of Absorbed Firm.

After deliberating one hour, jury of 10 men and 2 women last night in District Supreme Court exonerated Riggs National Bank of 17 former officers and directors of Farmers & Mechanics Bank, of Georgetown, in a suit for $300,000 damages by Mrs. Louise T. Chambers.

Mrs. Chambers sued Riggs as successor bank to the Farmers & Mechanics. She claimed the bank, and the executives of the absorbed bank were responsible for the loss she sustained when Harry V. Haynes, former president of Farmers institution, managed her accounts.

She claimed $166,000 in stock besides checking and savings accounts, was lost as a result of mismanagement administration by Haynes. The latter served four years in prison for alleged mishandling of funds.

Mrs. Chambers charged that the Farmers Bank was responsible for Haynes' actions. She attributed to Riggs, as successor bank, a like responsibility.

Mrs. Chambers said, in testifying that Haynes acted not only as her agent but as an officer of the bank. This was denied by the defendant who asserted Haynes acted in his personal capacity when he manipulated stock transfers in her name.

Defense testimony showed that Mrs. Chambers, after advising with attorneys, signed two releases, exonerating the Riggs Bank of liability.

She was paid thousands of dollars for signing these releases, the defense claimed. In explanation Mrs. Chambers said she acted on the advice of attorneys.

Frank J. Hogan and Edmund Jones, attorneys for the Riggs and other defendants, claimed the bank did all it could to relieve Mrs. Chambers' distress.

Trial lasted 20 days. Attorney Vernon Lowry, representing Mrs. Haynes, last night had not determined if he would appeal.

Tennessee, Smarting Under 2 Defeats, Assures G. W. Fighting Foes

Only 4 Games Lost by Vols In 8 Years

Feathers and Wynn Are Heavy-Duty Players of Invaders.

STRIPPED of whatever honors it earned during the roaring 1932 season, and just beginning to strike its true stride after a haphazard beginning in the current campaign, Tennessee will be in a savage mood Saturday when it lines up with George Washington at Griffith Stadium. It is this fighting frame of mind that the Colonial coaches fear may send their charges stumbling into defeat.

The Vols escaped undefeated last season to share the championship of the South with Auburn. The only blemish on an otherwise perfect record was a scoreless tie with Vanderbilt, and it cost them an outright and undisputed claim to the honors.

Tennessee's slate for this season shows three victories and two defeats. After taking V. P. I. and Mississippi into camp, it dropped a hard fought, 10-2 decision to Duke. Alabama made it two defeats in a row with a 12-6 triumph the following week, but Tennessee came back fighting and felled a powerful Florida eleven, 13-6 last Saturday.

Four Defeats in Eight Years.

That the Vols should lose two games in successive weeks is all the more remarkable when one considers that they have lost only four games in the last eight years. In all that time only 22 touchdowns have been chalked up against it. A record that borders on the impossible in this day and age of high powered scoring elevens. Tennessee has not sidestepped the tough ones in compiling this enviable mark. It met them all and took them in stride.

Tennessee would be tough enough for G. W. under ordinary circumstances, but with it making strenuous preparations to rebuild its shattered reputation, it will be twice as difficult to stop.

Feathers Chief Star.

In Beatty Feathers, an all-American last year and apparently slated for similar honors this season, the Vols have a back who is the answer in no uncertain terms to a coach's prayer. Feathers can back up a line, block and tackle in addition to his triple-threat offensive qualities. "Breezy" Wynn, a rangy full back, usually accompanies Feathers on his trips with the ball. Wynn is considered the best blocking back in the South.

George Washington has no individual comparable with Feathers, but its entire back field combines all the merits of the Tennessee ace. Leemans can punt, Romba can crash the line, McCarver can skirt the ends, and Baker can heave passes, and that is how the downtown school will meet the challenge. With outstanding players, but not with a cohesive attack embracing all players.

Shift of Olympics From Berlin Asked

Anti-Jewish Feeling Cause of A. A. U. Action.

Baltimore, Oct. 31 (AP).—A new movement to transfer the 1936 Olympic games from Berlin because of anti-Jewish feeling in Germany was started today by Albert F. Whelte, president of the South Atlantic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union.

In a letter to the associations of the A. A. U., Whelte asserted that "Germany, under the Nazis, has shown no disposition to observe the basic principles of sportsmanship" and said he would bring the question before the National A. A. U. convention at Pittsburgh, November 19, 20 and 21.

"If Germany persists in her present tactics, it is impossible, on the basis of an ideal of sportsmanship and a proper regard for our fellow athletes who may be Jews, for the Olympic games to be held in Berlin in 1936 as scheduled.

Largest Advance Sale For G. W.-Vol. Game

Advance sale of George Washington-Tennessee football tickets is reported as heavy as that preceding the 1932 G. W.-Alabama game that drew the largest crowd ever to attend a local college gridiron contest.

For the benefit of Tennessee alumni, a special Tennessee section has been set aside and tickets for this block of seats are now available at Spalding's, 717 Fourteenth street northwest.

Tennessee's Terrible Trinity Who Will Test Power of George Washington's Line

The Colonials' forward wall will meet its severest test on Saturday when it attempts to turn back, left to right, Herbert Brackett, quarter back; Beattie Feathers, half back, and Dick Dorsey, half back, of Tennessee. Brackett and Feathers helped elevate the Vols to the cochampionship of the South last season.

Winooka Race Marks Debut Of Pimlico

Operation of Totalisator Also to Be Feature of Meet Opening Today.

THE introduction of betting as controlled by the totalisator and another appearance of Winooka, the Australian champion, have served to spur interest as the Maryland racing scene shifts to ancient Pimlico today. The automatic, electric machine which registers every wager and gives an accurate display of odds has been thoroughly tested and is reported ready.

It is to the totalisator, and to Winooka in some measure, that the Maryland Jockey Club is looking for a successful meeting. Last summer, at Arlington Park, the "tote" was put to the acid test and came through with flying colors. Stockholders in that organization credited the machine with keeping the meeting in the "black."

Stimulated Betting.

The Arlington mutuel play fell off only 4 per cent of the 1932, while drops in betting of 25 per cent were experienced at all other racing plants in the vicinity of Chicago.

Winooka is the biggest problem of the better and perhaps the best individual drawing card among the horses now in Maryland. In two appearances at Laurel, Winooka ran like a selling plater and then came back to show an encouraging if losing performance. Today, he will be seen again ih a sprint race. This time it is the Baltimore Handicap.

The big horse will carry 120 pounds, six less than on previous occasions and will meet practically the same kind of horses that beat him at Laurel. Springsteel, which defeated the Anzac, will start as will Gold Step. Hope to Do, Bold Lover and others.

Britt Will Ride.

While there was some talk at Laurel yesterday that Sonny, Capital boy, would have the mount on Winooka, indications are that Edgar Britt, the Australian boy, will do the riding.

Many believe that the track record of 1:10 4-5, held jointly by Con Amore and Mainmast, will be threatened, if not bettered, in the race.

Red Sox Send Hodapp And Oliver to Minors

Golf Precedent Set By Virginia Van Wie

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Miss Virginia Van Wie, National women's golf champion, will tread where other feminine stars have not trod before.

The Chicago player will team with Leo Diegel, former National P. G. A. champion, to set a precedent in the amateur-pro preliminary of the Southern California Open Championship at the Fox Hills Country Club Thursday.

Miss Van Wie will be given a handicap of 6 strokes—the difference between men's and women's par. The team is considered one of the strongest in the tournament.

C. U. Will Play Thanksgiving Day Here

Meets "Major Opponent"; Cards Prepare for Loyola Game.

GLOOMY forebodings that Washington would have no Thanksgiving Day football game to appease its gridiron appetite were allayed yesterday by an announcement from Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics at Catholic University, to the effect that C. U. will meet an opponent of major importance at Griffith Stadium. Bergman promised that it will be a worth-while attraction. Negotiations are expected to be completed the latter part of the week.

Concurrently, the C. U. mentor announced that Friday's game with Loyola College, of Baltimore, will be staged in the Brookland Stadium starting promptly at 2 p. m.

Guard Against Upset.

Although the Cards expect very little trouble from Loyola, which is not up to its usual standard this season, they are leaving no opening for an upset. Work this week will be primarily for the Detroit U. game the following week-end, but precautions have been taken to include antidotes for whatever Loyola will have to offer.

Until dusk settled over the stadium the scarlet-garmeted varsity men shoved and mauled the white-jerseyed freshmen around the field in a tiring scrimmage. The coaches were well satisfied with the physical condition of the players, who had not indulged in hard work since the game with Wake Forest.

Oliver, Jankowski and Tom Geary did the heavy work yesterday, ripping through the line for huge gains. The linemen eased up to some extent at times, but when the eager yearlings showed too much vigor the pressure was reapplied with telling effect.

Babe Ruth Mentioned As Buyer of Browns

St. Louis, Oct. 31 (AP).—A decision on whether the heirs of the late Phil Ball will offer the money-losing St. Louis Browns for sale, or continue to operate the club, may be reached this week.

President William Harridge of the American League, who has said he will attempt to find a buyer for the Browns if the heirs desire his assistance, is expected here Thursday for a conference with trustees and executors of Ball's estate. Whether Harridge had a prospective purchaser in mind was not known here tonight.

The name of Babe Ruth tonight bobbed up in rumors concerning the future of the Browns. The rumor, which lacked substantiation, said Ruth, nearing the end of his playing career, might become interested with friends in ownership of the club.

Old Line Coach Again Shifts Gridmen

Original Starting Team to Get Call Saturday Against Virginia.

MARYLAND football coaches yesterday discarded the players they promoted to first team positions last week and restored the original occupants to good grace as they bent to their task of whipping the team into shape for Saturday's important game with Virginia. The Terrapins worked until well after dusk on new plays they will use against the Cavaliers.

Silber and Garrott, guards; Gretz, center; Crecca, quarter and Bucky Buscher, left half, were back on the second team following the shake-up. Their work against Western Maryland apparently convinced the coaches that Maryland's hopes for victory rest squarely on the shoulders of their original first team.

There may have been something that the Old Liners did correctly against Western Maryland, but the boys didn't think so after yesterday's stinging lecture. Poor blocking, tackling and charging were sharply criticized.

Teams Play Rubber Game.

Since 1925, when the teams resumed relations after a lapse of six years, each has won three and tied two. Maryland copped the 1931 game by a single point, getting its touchdown in the last two minutes of play, and kicking the extra point for victory. Virginia returned the compliment last season with a 7-6 victory in another thriller.

Neither team has an impressive record for the season. Maryland has lost every game since the inaugural with St. John's, and Virginia has done little better A victory Saturday for either eleven, however, would be balm for the smarting wounds.

On paper, Virginia is a slight favorite over the College Parkers. Upset by V. M. I., 13-12, in a thriller last week, the Cavaliers had lost the week before to Navy after holding the upper hand throughout the early stages of the battle. Columbia scored over them in a similar manner the week before.

Post Mortems . . .

Winooka, the so-called wonder horse from "down under," will try to dig himself up some lost prestige today . . . he meets Gold Step, Springsteel, Hope to Do, Character and some other good ones in the Baltimore Handicap, feature on Pimlico's opening card . . . and many pick him to win, despite the fact that he trailed the four named above in races at Laurel . . . District college football coaches are keeping President Clark Griffith so busy these days arguing over the use of the stadium that the Nat owner has little time to think of baseball . . . Mike Sebastian, Pitt star, knew he was going to do something against Notre Dame last Saturday . . . just before the Panthers left town, he found the battered headgear he wore last season when he made the touchdown that beat the Irish.

Experts in English . . . but as applied to a billiard ball . . . are to appear at the Lewis & Krauss parlors shortly . . . all of the big boys of the game will be booked . . . it is reported that no more athletic scholarships are to be given at Pitt . . . if true, this means that ere long, the Panthers will be booking games with teams like Gallaudet and American U. . . . veteran steeplechase trainers admired Trevallion, stablemate of Winooka, as he made a turn of the Pimlico oval yesterday morning . . . they told Trainer Polson that he was the type that would make a good fencer . . . "he is a better performer over the brush than on the flat," said Polson . . . so maybe he will be seen in a chase at Pimlico . . . in Australia it is the custom to jump all types of horses, this being considered a necessary aid to flat runners.

Sale of Grove Due, Report Persists.

Bishop, Earnshaw to Red Sox; Walberg May Go Too.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31 (AP). The Evening Ledger today says Connie Mack has traded Catcher Mickey Cochrane to the Detroit Tigers, and has sold Lefty Grove, ace pitcher, "either to the Chicago White Sox or the Boston Red Sox, probably the White Sox."

"Cochrane has already agreed to terms to manage the Bengals, and this announcement will be made very soon," the paper states.

The Ledger also says that Max Bishop has been turned over to the Red Sox in an exchange for cash, that George Earnshaw, right-hand hurler, will be sold, and that "there is a strong chance that Rube Walberg will join the big parade."

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, stood in Shibe Park today and emphatically said: "No, I haven't sold any ball players."

Denies Making Deals.

Visitors and telephone calls crowded into his circular office in the Tower and the ball park with revived reports that he had sold or traded several of his star players.

"I haven't made any deals," said the veteran leader of the former world's champions. "I haven't completed any negotiations and, therefore, there isn't anything to announce.

"I don't know what the future holds; there may be deals, but right now there is nothing to announce."

All of which Mack has said before. In the face of his denials, the reports persist from here and there. Men wise in the ways of baseball deals seem to think that before Connie Mack celebrates his seventy-first birthday on December 23, he will have announced the disposal of one or more of his stars.

Cochrane Report Persistent.

The most persistent reports concern Mickey Cochrane. He was seen in Detroit some weeks ago and rumor has him ready to sign up with the Tigers as their next manager. The only hitch, according to report, is that Mack and Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit club, have not agreed on price.

Published report says that Navin is willing to give $100,000 and Catcher Johnny Pasek, while Mack wants $125,000 and Catcher Ray Hayworth.

Last week report had it that Lefty Grove, Bishop and one other player were to go to the Boston Red Sox for $200,000. This was denied at both ends of the reported deal. Today, the report switched Grove to the Chicago White Sox, which brought a comeback from Chicago that he had not been offered.

Baseball observers fully expect that big George Earnshaw, who had some differences with Mack during the last playing season, will not be with the A's next year.

Walberg Also Named.

Rube Walberg is also believed to be destined for some other club.

Up to date reports of deals have involved pitchers Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg, Freitas and Claset; catcher Cochrane, infielders Foxx, Bishop and Williams and outfielder Coleman.

The new rumors brought Grove, Cochrane and Bing Miller to Shibe Park during the day, but none saw Connie Mack, as he had left the park. Grove came up from his Maryland home to take Cochrane, Miller, and Doc Ebling, the trainer, off on a gunning trip tomorrow.

"Don't know a thing about it," said Grove. "I haven't talked to Mr. Mack since the season closed.

Cochrane as soon as he found Mack was not at the park, waved a greeting and skipped out. He apparently did not want to talk.

Jack Lelivelt Signed.

Los Angeles, Oct. 31 (AP).—Jack Lelivelt, former Washington player, who managed the Los Angeles Baseball Club into the Pacific Coast League championship last season, signed a contract for 1934 today.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

I HAVE it straight from Jonathan K. Espey, whose business it is to beat the publicity tomtoms for G. W. U., that this Tennessee crew that will do battle with George Washington on Saturday is a collection of human juggernauts, no less.

When a team loses only four football games in eight years it is time to inquire into the whys and wherefores and my informant tells me that the underlying cause is the tremendous leg-drive that Maj. Robert Neyland, the Volunteers' coach, inculcates in his football players.

Leg-drive makes for smashing play and both backs and linemen of Tennessee generate prodigious power once under way. Even the slightest of Neyland's candidates develop this famous leg-drive or they are dismissed from the squad. Small wonder then, that Tennessee's offense is founded on power plays through the tackles. With his backs charging like human dynamos and his linemen plowing ahead like baby tanks, Tennessee's impressive record is no mystery.

Battle of Lines Looms.

George Washington's line will be put to its severest test on Saturday. The line play out at Griffith Stadium between the Colonials and the Volunteers has all the ear marks of a treat. If the fans are willing to take their eyes off Feathers and Leemans and McCarver and give a thought to the battle in the front line trenches, there is where the game may be decided.

The Colonials' line has been the key to whatever success the G. W. team has enjoyed this season, despite the spectacular runs of Leemans, McCarver and Baker. The Colonial backs were on their own once in the clear, but it was the deadly effect of the linemen who ploughed open the holes in the opposition defense.

With an eye to bolstering the team's line play, Coach Jim Pixlee is substituting Harrison for Hickman at guard in deference to the former's 180 pounds. On the other side of the line at guard, where Zuzu Stewart will be missing due to an injured knee, 204-pound Sid Kolker will be looking the Tennessee right guard in the face.

Notre Dame vs. Navy.

What a whale of a difference two years make. It was only in 1931 that Coach Hunk Anderson, of Notre Dame, was accused of "pulling his punches" against Navy and restraining his charges to a respectable score against the Midshipmen in deference to Coach Rip Miller, of Navy, a Notre Dame alumnus who was trying to make good at Annapolis.

Next Saturday there will be no pulling of punches. The Irish, beaten twice and tied once in four games, are out to recoup some of their lost prestige of 1933. An overwhelming victory against Navy presents the most immediate opportunity. And another thing, no Notre Dame team has been beaten three Saturdays hand-running since the first year football was instituted at South Bend.

Whereas the 1931 Navy-Notre Dame game was a foregone conclusion with Anderson working with the legacy left him by Knute Rockne, whose 1930 team was virtually intact, Navy is hot on the scent of a victory this season with its hopes buoyed no little by the convincing defeat of Penn last week.

Connie Mack Weakens.

With his surprise at reports that he will sell Lefty Grove wearing off, Connie Mack backtreads a bit in this morning's papers with the statement that "I haven't completed any negotiations and therefore haven't anything to announce."

All of which is in striking contrast to his vigorous denials of last week, when The Washington Post published exclusively the announcement that Lefty Grove and Max Bishop would join the Red Sox in the year's biggest baseball deal.

When the 1934 season opens, the following transfers will have been made: Grove, Walberg and Bishop to Boston; Cochrane and Earnshaw to Mack. You may lay to that.

Friday's Game.
Central vs. Tech.

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL'S china (twentieth to you) anniversary into the realm of things footbalic was celebrated yesterday afternoon when the Lincoln Park eleven defeated Roosevelt at Central Stadium, 21-6.

Whether it was a much improved Rough Rider team that continually harrassed the smooth-working blue-clad eleven from Lincoln Park or whether it was the fact that Eastern had second or third stringers in the line-up throughout seven-eighths of the game that kept the score down, will not be known this Halloween.

Three times the Roosevelt club drove down the field after making most of the yardage through the air, and three times the Roosevelt team was stopped. It was the fourth and final drive late in the third quarter that rung up the 6 points for the losers, their first score in the inter-high series.

Eastern Scores Early.

Eastern started as it had promised in the first minute of the ball game by scoring when Joe Mills tore off tackles for a 22-yard touchdown run. Joe also kicked the point and the thousand or so fans who witnessed the fray began to figure how much. The score had been made in three plays.

With but five minutes to go in the first stanza, Shaw and Keegin brought the ball down to the Roosevelt 10 on successive long distant smashes, netting 25 and 20 yards, respectively. Keegin then carried the leather to the 6, McCarthy to the 2, and Keegin again, over the goal line, bringing the total to 14 points for Eastern, after Jack McCarthy made the kick for extra point.

To start the second quarter, Chief Guyon sent in his second stringers and with the kickoff Roosevelt started its initial drive down the field.

23-Yard Pass Helps.

Cavanaugh to Garner on a wicked pass brought the ball past midfield, the heave was good for 23 yards and the run was good for 7 more. But then a flock of wild heaves to nobody in particular stopped further advancement of the Riders and Cavanaugh was forced to kick.

However, the Lincoln Parkers were unable to get going, being bottled up entirely by the swarming Orange and Blue Presidents, clear up to the final quarter.

Early in the fourth period the Cavanaugh-to-Garner air combination brought the ball again into Eastern territory. It was a 32-yard pass. But the Roosevelt forward wall failed to hold and the Rough Riders were forced to kick.

But finally Roosevelt tallied. It all started by way of the air. The first two downs and a lightning long-distance heave, Cavanaugh to Garner, brought the ball to the Eastern 25. The combination repeated the act and was rewarded with a 32-yard score over the Eastern line. Cavanaugh's pass to Beamer past the end zone was good, but failed to count.

Eastern scored its third touchdown when a Roosevelt bad pass from center was recovered by Pavis on the Rough Rider 45. A pass, McCarthy to Keegin, brought the ball to the 28, and then on a wide end run, 35 yards, Keegin dashed for the score. McCarthy's kick was good.

BALTIMOREANS are peeved because George Isemann, secretary of the N. D. P. B. congress, in announcing the program of sweepstakes on which the National Duckpin congress will base its national rankings, did not include any Baltimoreans. The Monumental City bowlers think that Mr. Isemann is leaving them in the dark regarding his plans, and suggest that he extend his mailing list to their city, New England and the South, as well as Washington, which has all the earmarks of sarcasm.

Anna Yagge, Takoma star, captured individual honors in the Ladies Lutheran League on the Arcadia drives last night, tumbling 134 pins for high game and 306 for high set. Incarnation, with 485, took high team game, while Trinity's 1366 set was unsurpassed.

Miller (Trinity), rolling a 136 game, and Cummings (Takoma Blues), with a 365 set, carried away individual honors in the Mens Luthern Church League at the Arcadia. St. Paul No. 1 and St. Marks took high team game and set with 589 and 1644, respectively.

Arcadia took the old game from McGuire & Rolse in their postponed match at the Arcadia Alleys. Noble Biers, sr. (Arcadia), with a 149 game and 382 set, enabled his team to carry away team honors. Arcadia had a team game of 584 and set of 1,700.

Wade Koontz (First Brethren), captured individual game honors in the East Washington Church League at Convention Hall, bagging 145 maples. Archie Hughes (Eastern Presbyterian), had a high set of 371, Ninth, No. 1, annexed both high team game and set, with 566 and 1,639, respectively.

Trinity Men's Club jolted Presbyterian back into second place by taking the odd game, in the Takoma Church League, on the Takoma drives last night. Baptist Christian assumed the leadership in the league by sweeping its match with Lady of Sorrows. Catholic Mission won two out of three from Presbyterian, No. 1, and Trinity took two from Lutherans. Dutch Sherbahn (Presbyterian, No. 1), had a 147 game and 358 set for individual honors, while Baptist Christian had a high team set of 1,655.

A sweepstakes will be rolled at the Arcadia Bowling Alleys on Saturday for an entry in the Dixie Sweepstakes. Three games will be rolled by each contestant, total pins to decide the winner. Entrance fee for the event, which starts at 10 o'clock, will be $1.60, including price of games.

Johnny Schaeffer was the individual star in the Jewelers League at Lucky Strike alleys, setting the pace with a 132 game and 339 set. Bluesteins captured team honors with a 575 set and total pinfall of 1,563.

Bold Reporter Dons Gloves With Both Miller and Sarron

By Bill McCormick.

MY boss gets the funniest ideas. He had one of them in connection with this Pete Sarron-Freddie Miller fight which happens tonight at Portner's Arena.

"You can box a little, can't you?" he queried in an innocently conversational tone.

"Oh, sure! Of course, I'm not as young as I once was, but I still fling a mean glove. And my right hand! Whew! Feel that," I blurted, flexing a peanut-sized right bicep.

"That's fine. Now you hop over and work a round or two with both Sarron and Miller, then come back here and write about it."

"Oh, Boss! Now wait a minnit. After all, Boss, I'm not in condition. You take pretty good care of yourself why don't you——"

"I'm too heavy for those featherweights," snapped back my boss, who knows all the answers. "You told me once you could lick any man in the world your weight—now here's your chance."

"Boss, you misunderstood me. I said woman—not man."

"Scram—and don't come back without that story."

So-o-o, here 'tis.

PETE SARRON was just climbing out of the ring at Portner's, where he trains, when I arrived.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Sarron," I tremuloed, calling a fighter Mister for the first time in my life.

"Hurrump," hurrumphed the squat Syrian, ordinarily the most amiable of individuals. Things weren't looking so good. Evidently Pete was in that perfect condition that makes ordinarily docile pugs want to bite their own grandmothers.

"Mr. Sarron, I would very much like to work a round—a teenie-weenie round—this afternoon, so I can write a story about it. But I guess you wouldn't want to work any more today," I added hopefully.

Sure, Why Not?

"I'd be glad to. They wouldn't let me box today, and I'm just itching to throw gloves," assented the Birmingham bruiser with suspicious abruptness. I was soon in ring togs and two anemic knees peeking from beneath, abbreviated ring panties played a castanet accompaniment as we squared off.

Many have wondered why some boxer doesn't poke Sarron off balance with a left jab, then shoot a right cross to the button. We tried it. The jab missed and this reporter fell on his face as a left hook caught him in the back of the neck. We tried another which slipped over a bobbing head and allowed two Sarronic fists to pump into a pillow-like brisket. That jab never found the mark. Sarron is all rapidly rotating arms. Trying to penetrate his whirlwind defense is as futile as stabbing an electric fan with a toothpick.

And Then They Mix It.

We mixed the last half of the round. Sarron pulled his punches—but they still stung. Punches fly from him like sparks from an emory wheel. In the clinches he is as strong and rough as a bear. He passed up several openings into which he had maneuvered me. Only one blow worked at all effectively against him—a right to the body which found its mark when I slipped my shoulder under Sarron's left arm.

The hours long, the two-minute round was finally over. Back on the pavement it suddenly occured to me that I hadn't done so badly—in fact, I did fine—to tell you the truth.

"We wuz robbed."

Brentwood Hawks, Notice.

Manager Joe Kuhen of the Brooks Club is anxious to communicate with the Brentwood Hawks regarding a game Sunday. He can be reached at the club, Metropolitan 6076, after 7:30 p. m.

"MR. MILLER," I greeted N. B. A. featherweight Freddy Miller, for the second time in my life calling a fighter Mister.

"Mr. Champ to you," growled back the half-pint bundle of championship fighting ability. Off to another bad start. I would be bold. I seized the bull by the horns and blurted:

"Mr. Champ, my boss wants me to work a round with you for a story."

"Who'll write the story?" queried Miller.

"If you're able. Okay it's a shame to do it, but come on," agreed the N. B. A. title holder. He tossed me a pair of gloves and without removing my shirt we squared off. Thank goodness, my knees couldn't be heard clicking this time.

Never Mind His, Right.

So, this guy's a southpaw. Wait'll he gets ready to let the left go, then beat him to it with a right. Circle to the left and hold your right ready. Never mind his right—southpaws don't have rights. I circled, thought I saw an opening and let the right go. Wham! I was on the floor. From a left—so they tell me. Better get up and just keep circling—never mind trying to land that right. I circled again. Miller's right started, but I was riding with it. Wham! I was on the floor again. This time from a left hook—or so they tell me.

I tried hard to keep away from him, but old age and the dog watch had taken their toll. Before we had worked a minute I was very thankful for 12-ounce gloves. Miller shifted, feinted and stepped in and out with remarkable facility for a puncher. A left uppercut to the body was followed by a jarring right hook.

That, For Sarron.

Fortunately, at this juncture, one of Miller's handlers indicated the elapse of the round. I was in my coat and into a taxi headed back to the office in a jiffy. I won't want to see either of them fight I'll know how they're suffering every time they get hit.

But, champ or no champ, I'm picking Sarron tonight.

Mrs. John Shorey shot a 90 each day, finishing up only 1 down to par as well as capturing the low gross. Mrs. C. S. Pearl, wife of the donor, had 89-97—136, being awarded the second tournament prize when Mrs. Shorey chose to accept the low gross prize instead of the second tournament award.

Pegler Says

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—It looks as though Connie Mack had discovered the germ of a bright and profitable idea in his decision to scrap another good ball club and start all over again. Now if the baseball magnates would just get together and pool all their athletes, break up all their clubs every fall and draw the names out of a hat as a means of choosing up sides for next season, they would equalize things, revive competition and interest and eliminate the dead spots such as St. Louis in the American League and Cincinnati and Philadelphia in the National.

Of course, this would abruptly remove popular local drawing cards from their surroundings and might affect the loyalty of some of the customers until they got accustomed to the new deal, but the same sort of business has been going on anyway for years under the trading and selling system.

Mack Cleaning House.

In the present instance, Mr. Mack is about to get rid of Mose Grove, Mickey Cochrane, George Earnshaw, George Walberg, and others for cash, stamps and something out of the attic. The Philadelphia customers will not resent this move because the customers will have learned by this time that it is really none of their business what a magnate does with their idols, as we call them in our romantic pieces. The customer has the right to buy tickets or not buy them, and that lets him out.

If he doubts this he must have forgotten the trading around of such celebrities as Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch, Lefty (O'Doodle) O'Doul and Al Simmons. The magnate never consults the customer when he wishes to move out one athlete, for whatever reason, and move in another who may be lighter to carry on the pay roll and much cheaper on the hoof than the man he sent away.

So the notion that the customer interest would be adversely affected by this plan is not worth considering. In fact, the customer-interest is so faint nowadays, as suggested by the nonattendance of large numbers of them at the last world series games, that any change at all would be for the better.

Might Be Some Problems.

There might be some little problems of detail to work out in connection with this plan, such as adjustments of salary contracts with the heroes themsevles but the thing just came to me a few minutes ago and I have not had time to develop it in all its phases. But anyway, like Mr. Roosevelt, I have at least a plan, which even if it should prove no good is certainly better than no plan at all, which is the present scheme of the major leagues. And, furthermore, given an idea like this for the mere price of a daily newspaper, the least the magnates can do is attend to the details. I am never any good on details but my ideas are big.

Drawing his players out of a pool, the poor club owner might come upon a year when Babe Ruth, Cochrane, Simmons and a couple of good pitchers would have landed in his employ to win a pennant for him.

The pool would make for unbalanced ball clubs but the lack of balance would be evenly distributed throughout both big leagues and that would be an improvement over the present plan which creates three, or at most, and only rarely, four competitive clubs in a league and makes bunnies of all the others.

It would, of course, call for a sort of communism.

Everybody Gets Grab.

The club with a lot of valuable personnel would have to throw it up for grabs and would certainly come up weaker and poorer. But in the baseball business, there is a community of interests even now which the firms will have to recognize soon. The customers will not come out in pay-loads to watch strong clubs lick feeble ones and if the strong firms wish to continue to prosper they must do something to establish competition in the games.

The dull dumb magnates get duller and dumber and so does the annual routine. I don't know whether I ought to give them this idea or not. But it's no use to me. I don't own a league. And anyway I've got to get rid of it to make room for more ideas.

Kicker Worry Of Hagerty At G. U.

COACH JACK HAGERTY was still seeking the answer to an old problem as he continued preparations for Saturday's important game with Boston College at Beantown. The problem is what to do for a kicker now that Mack Stanley is out for the season.

Capt. Fred Callahan, Georgetown's giant center, was given a trial at punting but did not come up to Hagerty's standard. Nick Viskovitch, a half back did quite well until a leg injury rendered him hors de combat, and last week Joe Maglin, a reserve back who had hot been under fire until the William and Mary game, had an opportunity to display his ability.

He did fairly well, considering it was his first attempt, but whether he will be assigned to this duty again is conjectural.

Scrimmage Is Out.

Scrimmage is taboo at the Hilltop lest the slim squad be reduced by injuries. Georgetown has been crippled since the second game of the season and will be at full strength this week for the first time since then. Hagerty argues that the team will need all available reserves to cope with Boston College's manpower.

Boston fans will see a Georgetown team that is vastly different from the Hoya aggregations of the past. The players are not as mature as in the good old days and consequently not able to stand the bruising battles as well as their predecessors. The only similarity between the past and the present is fighting spirit, of which there is an abundance.

Trailing at the half in its game with Manhattan, Georgetown rallied to earn a 20-20 tie and was headed for the winning touch down when halted by an untimely fumble. It rallied against William and Mary, even after it had apparently lost the game on an intercepted pass, and came back in the final minute of play with a brilliant march that carried it to the enemy's 10-yard line, where time expired. In all of its games, the team has played better in the second half than in the first.

Pharatime Wins Juvenile Sprint, Laurel Closing Feature

Giggling Out Of Money In Upset

Lowry Scores a Triple and Tipton Rides Two Winners.

THE horse laugh was on the favorite players as Laurel ended its month-long session yesterday. Giggling, second in the Breeders' Futurity at Latonia last Saturday, and considered one of the year's juvenile finds, was played here, there and everywhere and went to the post at 90 cents on the dollar. Giggling did about 30 cents worth of running and the giggling was done by the backers of Pharatime.

Giggling not only did not win the race, but did not run second, third or fourth. The star 2-year-old was fifth, thank you, in a six-horse field. One A. Richards went through the motions of riding the horse, which went along on top due to its own courage before throwing up the sponge, literally, of course.

Aside from the disappointing Giggle angle, the race was a good one to watch. Pharatime, Zipalong and High Torque moved up as a team in the stretch to wipe out a sprouting lead that Laurel Miss had gained at the quarter pole.

Pharatime Pays $13.20.

Pharatime was credited with a half length victory over Zipalong, with High Torque another half a length away. The winner paid $13.20. The race was dubbed The Chestertown.

Jockeys Lowry and Tipton between them accounted for five winners. The former scored a triple, piloting Doeskin, Commuter and Bub McFarland home first, while Tipton registered with Fancy Flight and Barry.

Doeskin, purchased at a bargain price in paddock auction here recently, brought the Starmount Stable a purse in the first race, defeating a field of 12 juveniles at 6 furlongs. Doeskin followed the swift pace set by Flying Wind and then moved up to win by a length over Skimalong and Guiding Light. Sturdy Ark, the favorite, finished with a speedy, but futile, rush in the stretch. The winner paid a $10.40 mutuel.

Thistle Play, nowhere the other day, came romping home in the second race to the tune of a $21.20 mutuel. Kacala cut the rail at the stretch turn to pass Cruising and win going away. Cruising lasted for the place award and Glorify, the favorite, was third. West Main was backed down from 8 to 1 to 7 to 2 on the odds board, but was blocked at the turn for home.

Commuter Barely Lasts.

Commuter barely lasted to win the third race as the favorite players continued to take a beaten. They were only a neck away this time with Fort Dearborn a fast-closing second. Just Fun managed to grab the show money. Commuter followed War Saint most of the way before moving into the lead. The pay-off was at the rate of $13 for a deuce.

Fancy Flight gave the short-price betters a chance to cheer in the fifth race, a six-furlong sprint for the better class claimers. The daughter of Infinite was hustled to the front by Tipton and that was the end of the competition. Acautaw, after delaying the start with an assortment of acrobatics, was second with Kate, long shot, third.

A last-minute plunge on Longford for place and show caused startling prices on the race, with the first and second choices in win betting running one, two. Fancy Flight and Acautaw paid $4 each to place, while Acautaw paid $4.80 to show and Fancy Flight $3.40.

Barry scored an easy victory in the sixth, going to the front on the final swing and drawing out on Axentea by two lengths. Royal Durbar closed fast to be third.

Credit for the longest scoring run in football history—the distance being measured in a direct line—goes to Wyllys Terry, of Yale, who took the ball five yards behind his own goal line and ran the full length of a 110-yard field to score.

The ball was snapped to Terry in punt formation, but he failed to kick, choosing instead to run with it. Terry's 115-yard record has stood for 49 years.

Telegraphic communication, strange as it seems, works on a system by which the more the lines are in use the less electricity they use. Idle lines use the most power. In the simple form of telegraphy—the hand-operated key—the current flows continually while the key is closed. The key is opened to interrupt the flow of electricity by dots and dashes when messages are being sent, thus allowing less current to flow, and consuming less electricity.

The more complex methods used in telegraphy, such as the automatic printing system and the multiplex, which makes it possible to send eight telegrams over one wire at the same time, have this much in common with the old-fashioned hand key: They use more "juice" when they are not being used.

Tomorrow—The tall family.

Dear Al: Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 1.

While the Laurel meeting was none too pleasant from a number of angles, the closing day yesterday left a sour taste in my mouth. Two decisions were made by the stewards yesterday. Jockey A. Richards was suspended for his unsatisfactory ride on Giggling, the beaten favorite in the feature, and Apprentice J. Burrill was set down for rough riding on Golden Fate. From where I sat, Richards appeared to have ridden no worse than I've seen Tipton, Lowry, Bellizzi, Coucci and Workman perform on occasions. And from where I sat, J. Burrill wasn't as rough as I've seen Workman, Gilbert, Coucci and Jones on occasions. Horses that figured to win as much as did Giggling yesterday have been out of the money with little comment made. Boys like Richards and Burrill get few mounts. Perhaps the mistakes they are alleged to have made yesterday are the result of their observation of the high-salaried riders.

BILL.

First race—Salisbury appears to hold the upper hand over this field of Maryland breds. Has been competing in better company. Fit and ready for a hard race. Cantoria gets in with light weight and may be dangerous. Glen Burnie's recent sprint victory can't be tossed aside.

Second race—Be Shy was unlucky in that last race, Meade was forced to pull the Bradleyite's head high into the air just before reaching the quarter pole. No mishaps today and we may see this one home at a fair sort of price. Knight of Old and Black Falcon for the other awards.

Third race — Snapback wasn't good enough to flag the flying Monel in that recent race. However, the same effort will make him hard to beat. Don Pedro has been running well of late, and I'm taking him to lead the consistent Deduce to the wire.

Fourth race — I'm sticking to Bright Beauty. This mare has won twice for me, and I believe we will make three today. She picks up some weight, but appears capable of handling it. Fairly Wild and Olamay for the rest.

Fifth race—Winooka takes off 6 pounds and with a change in riders might make the boys sit up and take notice in this sprint. However, he might win despite the presence of young Britt in the saddle. Good Advice and Bold Lover for the place and show.

Sixth race—The Labrot entry of Tred Avon and Monel appears the best at this route. The first named was near track-record time for a mile in last Saturday's Washington Handicap. Curacao comes off of fast sprint and will be dangerous here. Kerry Patch to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Modern Times is an honest sort and has shown good form since returning to competition. Due for brackets today. Resisting and Backgammon to do the chief chasing.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOESKIN, $10.40, $4.80, $3.60; SKIMALONG, $7.20, $5.20; GUIDING LIGHT, $6.60.

DOESKIN, placed forwardly, swung to the outside when straightened into the home stretch, wore FLYING WIND down and had enough left to stall off SKIMALONG. GUIDING LIGHT, slower than usual to settle in his stride, went to the outside for racing room and closed stoutly while losing ground. STURDY ARK, lacking early speed, finished with a belated rush. BRIGHT TESS improved her position stoutly in the last half mile. FLYING WIND began quickly, displayed good early speed, but stopped suddenly. TOANO raced in the thick of contention and had no excuses. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:08½. Winner, Beau Brummel Stable's b. c. (3), by My Play—Lucinda. Trained by L. Uncar. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THISTLE PLAY, $21.20, $7.60, $4.00; CRUISING, $6.20, $3.80; GLORIFY, $3.20.

THISTLE PLAY, luckily securing racing room between the leaders when midway of the turn, slipped up on the inside of CRUISING when straightened into the home stretch and drew out nearing the finish. CRUISING, on the outside from the start, took a brief lead at the final furlong pole, but could not resist the winner. GLORIFY raced GOLDEN FATE into submission in the first half mile, but was no match for the first two when challenged. GOLDEN FATE, roushed about midway of the turn, came again when clear. WEST MAIN was badly blocked when moving into contention at the turn. CORRYMEELA was outrun.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:38½. Winner, Mrs. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COMMUTER, $13.00, $5.20, $3.80; FORT DEARBORN, $3.00, $2.40; JUST FUN, $9.60.

COMMUTER, rated for the first five furlongs, went to the leaders on the inside until displacing WAR SAINT, came around the pacemaker and under severe pressure, outlasted FORT DEARBORN. JUST FUN, entered contention readily, made a determined effort when straightened for the final drive, but was not good enough under punishment. JUST FUN, prominent and on the outside from the start, held on well. BLACK DIAMOND worked his way up on the outside, but could not menace the leaders. LIGHT BREEZE was unable to threaten the leaders. WAR SAINT stopped after seven furlongs. CONSIDERATE was used up in the early stages.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Chestertown. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:09. Winner, E. K. Bryson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARATIME, $13.20, $6.00, $4.40; ZIPALONG, $7.40, $4.80; HIGH TORQUE, $6.00.

PHARATIME, taken under slight restraint when GIGGLING was rushed into command, responded willingly in the final drive and was up in the final sixteenth. ZIPALONG, outside, rallied furiously the last half mile, finished with a bold bid. TENDERS during the closing furlong. HIGH TORQUE saved ground all the way and closed in game fashion. LAUREL MISS took command at the final furlong pole when coming through on the inside, but tired nearing the finish. GIGGLING was rushed off her feet after the start to take command and she weakened badly under punishment. CAN'T REMEMBER was crowded all during the stretch drive.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:47. Winner, J. H. Louchheim's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FANCY FLIGHT, $5.40, $4.00, $3.40; ACAUTAW, $4.00, $4.80; KATE, $6.80.

FANCY FLIGHT, quickest to set into full stride, showed nice speed while setting a fast pace, saved ground the entire trip and drew out when shaken up during the closing furlong. ACAUTAW, steadied in close pursuit of the leaders, was placed to punishment entering the home stretch, but could not threaten the winner. KATE, intensely handled from the start, held on well for the final issue. STROLL ALONG raced on the inside from the start, but could not better his position. LONGFORD could not reach the leaders. CRACKLE had early foot.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19. Winner, J. H. Miner's br. g. (3), by Black Servant—Bred at Home. Trained by L. L. Lycan. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:40 2-5, 1:53 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARRY, $6.60, $3.60, $3.00; AXENTEA, $3.60, $3.80; ROYAL DURBAR, $6.20.

BARRY, rated close to the leaders, disposed of THE BLACK midway of the final turn, went into a winning lead and held AXENTEA safe. Latter, kept forwardly placed, came around the outside and closed gamely. ROYAL DURBAR worked his way up gradually from a slow beginning. CROSS ROAD, far out of contention early, slipped through between her field and closed a big gap. SHENVALEE came determinedly after dropping back at the final turn. LAST BID had no mishaps. GADAROUND tired, as did THE BLACK.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51½. Off at 4:53. Winner, E. Kane's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUB McFARLAND, $12.80, $4.40, $3.40; UNION, $4.20, $2.80; HUT, $3.80.

BUB McFARLAND, restrained off the early pace, gained fast when taken to outside in the last half mile and was up in the last sixteenth. UNION, rated in front, opened up a winning lead at the final turn, but faltered nearing the finish. HUT entered contention when ready and finished gamely while in tight quarters between the first two. HIGH SOCKS hung during the closing furlong. BOUNDLESS DEEP was badly ridden from the start, and was badly blocked when PORTER attempted to move up on the inside of BRIGHT DAY at the final turn. He closed strong when clear.

Men of Learning.

When Doctor Johnson was on deck, and Boswell quoted, by the peck, his wise remark on varied themes, he would never run down, it seems. Whatever subject came along, he would discuss it, right or wrong; he knew theology by heart, was wise to politics and art; he knew how admirals should guide their fleets across the waters wide, and he would show, with chart and map, the soldier how to win a scrap. And he was loaded to the guards with all the works of all the bards from ancient Greece to modern times, and he could spout forth miles of rhymes, without a prompter to accost and tell him when his wires were crossed. On all the bards he placed his seal, and from him there was no appeal; this bard was punk and that one great, and t'other had an empty pate. He had his tireless leather lungs and spoke his piece in divers tongues; he'd talk in Latin for a while, then switch to Greek with easy smile; whatever language he employed, all opposition he destroyed, and men who came with purpose rude went forth bedraggled and subdued. The doctor would rear up and roar when someone tried to take the floor. To our distress, we must allow we seldom meet such learning now. Men talk of cars and rubber tires, forgetting poets and their lyres. Men talk about the income tax, and of the mortgage on their shacks and seldom mention Homer's name—is it a blessing or a shame? If we could hear Sam Johnson roar, would we denounce him as a bore?

Another Hollywood Salary Scandal—Film Director to Be Honored—A New Voice

Famous Artist Boosts Salary To Living Wage

While those struggling with the NRA Code of Fair Practice for the Motion Picture Industry have been so acutely annoyed by the allegedly exorbitant salaries being drawn by a supposedly vast number of picture stars, they must certainly have come across at least an occasional instance in which salary has been in no way commensurate with earnings. There are such cases, believe it or not.

For example, it has just come to light that Walt Disney, creator of the Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony short film features—the most popular entertainments of their kind in the world and the most widely distributed—has recently increased his salary from $150 to $200 a week!

This information is brought East by Roy Disney, brother of the artist, who is associated with him in the production of the short subjects in Hollywood.

Brother Roy's announcement coming on the heels of many fantastic conjectures as to Walt's supposed enormous earnings, brings to light one of Hollywood's strangest stories; a story doubly significant at the present time when unpleasant attention is being focused on the reputedly high salaries of movie celebrities.

Lives Modestly.

In spite of the fact that Walt Disney is probably the world's most famous cartoonist and that his pen and ink and Technicolor screen characters have become internationally popular, he is living on a very modest income, an income that is far under the various sums he has been reported as receiving.

Far from growing rich as various commentators have pointed out, Walt Disney is devoting his earnings to the further development of his pictures. Practically the entire income from his films and from the manufactured articles bearing the Mickey Mouse trade-mark are turned back into his business.

Except for this plan, it would have been impossible to produce the Silly Symphonies in Technicolor. Neither would it have been possible for Disney to build the modern studio in which his pictures are made, nor to assemble the world's finest staff of animators and technicians, nor the staff of composers and musicians which provides the elaborate original music for every one of the pictures which leaves the studio.

High Production Costs.

The cost of a Disney short feature is considerably higher than the average animated cartoon, and while they are seldom longer than 700 feet, they require as many as 15,000 separate drawings. They have been brought to the perfection they have attained only through an outlay of money that is not put into the ordinary cartoon.

Thus, the production expense of a Disney picture is such that it would be impossible for the artist to pay himself the huge private stipend that he has been reported as receiving. His principal ambition is to make his films even better than they are today, and he is working toward that end by using the bulk of his income for their continued improvement.

Good Business.

This is, of course, sagacious business on the part of Mr. Disney, whose "Three Little Pigs" have scored so sensationally that they are to be perpetuated in a whole series of Mother Goose cartoon-dramas.

He may not be drawing any stupendous salary during the process of establishing a fabulous property value in his plant and trade-marks, but if he should suddenly decide to sell out, it is doubtful if he would quit the game a very heavy loser!

One of the loveliest and most talented stars of light opera comes to the Rialto Theater on Saturday in what is hailed as the legitimate successor of "Be Mine Tonight" on the screen. This brilliant young star is Evelyn Laye, reigning blonde beauty of the British stage, who returns to the local screen in an elaborate film version of "Die Fledermaus," renamed by the cinema, "Waltz Time." The Johann Strauss music for "Waltz Time," as everyone knows, is almost historic in the realm of light opera and opera bouffe, for the gifted Johann to all intents and purposes was the originator of the lighter form of operatic diversion. Miss Laye, who made her New York debut under the Ziegfeld banner as star of Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet," is said to be supported by an admirable cast in a production that marks a high point of achievement among films of English origin.

RKO-Keith's Goes Social!

On Friday night at 9 o'clock the management of RKO-Keith's Theater, the cast of RKO-Radio's picture, "Rodney," being filmed at Fort Myer, with Walter Huston and Frances Dee in the stellar roles, and the general public will join in a tribute to George Archainbaud, one of filmdom's veteran directors, wielding the megaphone over "Rodney."

This gesture of affection and high regard for a man who has done much for the advancement of screen entertainment will be made on the stage of RKO-Keith's, with the guest of honor plucked from behind the camera and plumped down back of the footlights for all to meet and greet in the flesh.

Among the Guests.

Surrounding Mr. Archainbaud on this gala occasion will be the entire roster of the "Rodney" company, including in addition to Mr. Huston and Miss Dee, Frank Conroy, recently seen as the radio operator in M-G-M's all-star production of "Night Flight;" Pat Collins, Billie Rhodes, remembered by seasoned screen fans as a former comedienne of the first rank and one of the cinema's most vivacious brunettes; Ralph Remley, former member of the old Poli Stock Company of 1911, or thereabouts, in which Hardie Meakin, now manager of RKO-Keith's, also appeared; Robert Shayne, a District youth who is getting himself somewhere as an actor; Argyle Nelson, assistant director of "Rodney," and Tommy Atkins, production manager.

Following the appearance of all these on the Keith stage, where Walter Huston has already made one personal appearance since his arrival in Washington, a backstage buffet supper will be served for the guests of honor and members of the local press, together with the officers of the U. S. Army cooperating in the making of "Rodney" at Fort Myer. The military will be headed by Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, commandant at Fort Myer.

The original booking for the week beginning Friday at RKO-Keith's was "After Tonight," starring Constance Bennett, which was directed by Mr. Archainbaud. Owing to unavoidable circumstances it was found necessary to defer the showing of this picture to the week of November 10.

In its place will be presented "Midshipman Jack," made in large part at Annapolis with several well-known Washingtonians as "atmosphere." "Midshipman Jack" still ties itself up, in a measure, to the Friday night soiree planned by Mr. Meakin, for when Christy Cabanne, the director, was taken ill and unable to finish the picture, it was completed by Tommy Atkins, now with the "Rodney" unit.

In case you do not immediately identify George Archainbaud, among the many pictures he has made you may recall "The Common Law," "The Lost Squadron," "States Attorney," starring John Barrymore, and "The Penguin Pool Murder," with Edna May Oliver, on view currently with Jack Pearl and Jimmy Durante in "Meet the Baron," on the screen at Loew's Fox.

Hitting the Heights!

As "Lucia" in Donizetti's tragic Italian opera, the tall, 25-year-old Coloratura from Seattle climaxed the famed "mad scene" with a "G sharp" above "high C"—a note not heard on Gotham's operatic stage within the memory of Manhattan critics.

Miss Le Rae, however, is reported to have calmed down with the "sextette" and was perfectly at ease in the cadenzas of the "mad scene."

Signed by Salmaggi.

Alfredo Salmaggi, maestro of the Chicago Opera Company, whose local efforts fell a little short of perfection, heard Miss Le Rae at a Chicago audition last summer and signed her up promptly for the debut at the Hippodrome Monday night.

The blond soprano was born on an Idaho ranch. Her family moved to Seattle when she was a girl. This is her first season in grand opera.

A voice with such a range as this has not been heard in the Capital since that memorable week years ago when a young woman—one of three sisters in the company—named Methvin appeared at the Columbia Theater with the late Eddie Foy, in "Over the River." Miss Methvin, whose first name at the moment is wholly evasive, startled all who heard her by taking "C" in altissimo at the end of one of her numbers. Her "C" above "High C" was taken so clearly and truly that no instrument in the orchestra could match it and she accordingly sang the note unaccompanied.

Reverting momentarily to the Archainbaud event at RKO-Keith's Friday night, it should be said that since Frances Dee, leading woman in "Rodney" slipped quietly away last week and was married to Joel McCrea, also a popular star of the screen, and since both Miss Dee and Mr. McCrea have been registered at the Shoreham since last Saturday, it is highly probable that when Miss Dee appears on the Keith stage with the "Rodney" company. Mr. McCrea will be somewhere around and may be coaxed out there behind those footlights, too.

Back to Road Shows.

It comes to the knowledge of this department on unquestionable authority that Manager Jimmie Lake has signed contracts for the resumption of touring road-show attractions at the Gayety Theater, effective in the near future.

Being apprised of the extraordinary quality of touring burlesque offerings being presented in other Eastern cities, Mr. Lake dispatched his scouts to look over a few of the companies—they play as nearby as Philadelphia—and was elated to learn that they assay high in feminine pulchritude and modern "smartness."

In fact, they are confidentially reported to mark a new standard in "girl shows," rough-house comedy being consistently subordinated to the lure of feminine beauty. Each company carries 24 girls, all described as beauties. The scout who reported the matter to this desk seemed in an honest quandary as to how so many beautiful women might belured to the burlesque stage.

The only point that remains to be definitely determined is whether the new bookings will be inaugurated on Ninth street the week of November 12 or a week later on the 19th. Present indications point to the 12th.

In "Broadway Through a Keyhole," opening at Loew's Fox on Friday and accorded a preview screening for the dramatic desks Monday noon, there seem to be two bands—one led by Abe Lyman, the other by Russ Columbo. As a matter of fact, it is all Abe Lyman's band, tossed around to suit the requirements of the action. Columbo seems to be leading some of the time, but his purpose in the picture evidently is to create a considerable surprise by turning out to be a better actor than anyone would have suspected. "Broadway Through a Keyhole" is typical Broadway fare, extremely good in some spots and quite the opposite in others. Uneven and spotty as it is, the final score will be cast up on the side of popular entertainment.

Prosperity Note!

Times must be looking up. Last night's confetti had a much richer flavor than last year's and increased public buying power was evidenced by the larger portions that were hurled down your throat every time you opened your mouth on any of our downtown thoroughfares.

At any rate, that's better than finding some one's cow on the roof of your garage!

Beauty Returns to Local Screen

That gorgeous blonde who captivated Broadway in Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet" and subsequently was seen with John Boles in the American-made film, "One Glorious Night," on Saturday again will be seen as a star of the cinema at the Rialto Theater. Her name, of course, is Evelyn Laye and her vehicle, the British picture, "Waltz Time," declared one of England's best.

Simeoni Real Boss of Opera, And Proves It

Youthful ItalianConductor Will Be Seen on Job in Washington.

Though Maurice Frank is director of the International Opera Co., Gabrielle Simeoni, young Italian conductor, is its boss.

Frank selects his company's repertoire and casts his operas just as he is doing for a series of operas to be given here the week of November 19. He engages the show house—in the present case the Washington Auditorium—conducts the seat sales and sees to all the innumerable details normally the job of opera impressarios. But Simeoni runs the opera, just as he will in Washington.

Proves He Is Boss.

Simeoni's flying hair, his swiftly moving baton, the virile, alive tempo of his direction are as much a part of the Frank operas as Frank or the people who sing them. No prima donna has anything on Simeoni for temperament.

At a rehearsal in Pittsburgh he ran Carmela Ponselle, whose tempermental outbursts are themselves remarkable, and Frank out of the theater. Simeoni is boss.

Though Simeoni has conducted mass operatic festivals for thousands at Madison Square Garden, at the Polo Grounds, at the Boston Opera House, at Chicago's Soldiers' Field, never has he been available at prices lower than those at which The Post is offering seats for the Capital's grand opera week.

Lowest Ever Offered.

The opera company's prices are the lowest at which grand opera ever has been offered Washington. Seats to the opera are available to Post readers at half of these, at 25, 46 and 55 cents.

Hundreds daily are availing themselves of the opportunity to see and hear complete performances of grand opera by presenting themselves with a copy of The Post, to identify them as readers, at the Stieff music store, 1340 G street northwest. Mail orders, accompanied by a Washington Post date line, also are being received.

Two D. C. Men Join Reserves.

Judges Chosen To Select the Prize Winners

Entrants in the Washington Post-Loew Theaters contest to pay poetic tribute to Marie Dressler on her sixty-second birthday, will be assured of unbiased and erudite appraisal of their efforts.

This was assured by the selection yesterday of two of the District's most scholarly and widely known citizens, Dr. George Bowerman, librarian of the Capital's public library system, and Mr. Stephen H. Kramer, assistant superintendent of the local school system, as judges.

To Dr. Bowerman and Mr. Kramer will fall the task of designating those four and eight-line rhymes which are the most original and cleverest expressions of birthday greetings to Miss Dressler. The winners selected by these eminent judges will be awarded the attractive prizes offered.

To the best poetic contribution, The Post and the Loew Theaters in the Capital will award a cash prize of $15; the second-best poem will be awarded a $10 cash prize, and ten pairs of guest tickets go to the ten next best rhyming tributes.

The prize-winning poem in this city will be sent to Hollywood to compete for a national prize of $250 in cash, offered by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. National judges will be Norma Sherrer, Clarence Brown, ace director; Anita Loos, noted writer, and Ramon Novarro.

Get busy then, and submit as many four or eight line rhymes as you wish, that will pay your poetic respects to Miss Dressler, who celebrates her sixty-second birthday on November 9. This will be an event that will be international in scope.

Your poems must be in the hands of the contest editor not later than midnight Thursday, November 2.
